The entertainment given by the Band of Hope Saturday afternoon and evening was rich and did great credit to the young folks and their teachers. Mrs. McAndrew was relieved of a large share of the responsibility by her son, William, to whose faithful work in arranging the parts and drilling the children the successful termination was due.

Wednesday afternoon, about half past five it looked as if Sergeant Finley was to have a practical experience of a hailstorm or cyclone here on his native heath. As usual, in Ypsilanti, the angry clouds divided, mainly passing to the north-east of us. We are printing circulars for the Sergeant to be addressed to observers in all parts of the west, pertinent and comprehensive enquiries in regard to the facts of violent storms.

The Michigan Good Templar for May appears, as heretofore, printed in clear type on a good quality of book paper and containing valuable information for every well wisher of the order and outside temperance parties as well. Felch was a member of the legislature when the school system of Michigan, recommended by Mr. Pierce received the sanction of that body, and has since been personally acquainted with his work in the educational field. His address was a just tribute to the fidelity and wisdom of the deceased in his chosen work, and contained some valuable thoughts on education in general. Judge Joslin introduced the speaker and made the closing remarks.

At a meeting of ladies on Wednesday of last week, much interest was expressed on the subject presented in a letter of the National Indian Association. It is hoped all will become acquainted with the actual facts of this question. A pamphlet giving the real "Indian Question" can be obtained from the booksellers, A. Williams & Co. 283 Washington St., Boston Mass. Price 25c. We have not room for the letter. It claims that our present Indian policy tends to extermination; that the Indian reservation system gives unlimited power, which no good man desires and no bad man can safely have. The abolition of these evils in Canada has worked well. We quote: "There the protection and punishment of English law alone have formed the simple and beneficent Indian policy, a mode of government which has resulted in no Indian war." There is now an organization having nineteen state committees of christian women. The leaders in the movement call for help to cleanse our nation of one its foulest stains.

THE SEVENTEENTH ANNUAL MEETING OF THE STATE MEDICAL SOCIETY.

The convention convened at the Opera House at 10 A. M., Wednesday morning. The President Dr. Jerome of Saginaw in the chair, Dr. Ranney of Lansing Secretary. The accident at Dexter detained a portion of the western delegation. A prayer by Dr. McCorkle and address of welcome by Capt. E. P. Allen. A spicy debate arose in regard to printing proceedings. Complaint was made that six months often elapsed before the printed journal was delivered. It was voted that if the transactions of the society are not published within sixty days the author of any paper can have it printed in any medical Journal he chooses. Dr. Post participated in this discussion. The society is financially in a happy condition. The treasurer reported a balance on hand of $502.33. Dr. E. P. Christain of Wayandotte read a paper entitled History of True Cases of Malpresentation, which was loudly applauded, and it was resolved to have it printed in the annual pamphlet. Dr. C. R. Burr of Pontiac followed by reading a paper on The Insanity of Masturbation, which was also adopted. Dr. Connor of Detroit read a paper on A Cerebral Tumor, which was accepted.

Thursday election of officers: President, Dr. John Topping, Dewitt; Vice-President, S. S. French, Battle Creek; Secetary, G. E. Ranney, Lansing; Treasurer, A. R. Smart, Hudson. P. Belle Warner of this city was admitted to the society.

On Wednesday evening the President's address was delivered by Dr, Jerome of Saginaw. The address was a well prepared and well delivered paper, the topic being a defense of the code of ethics adopted by the society, especially insisting that it is the duty of the society to protect the public against empiricism and charlatanism of every name and form. The address closed with a very appropriate tribute to the memory of distinguished physicians recently deseased who were members of the society. The thanks of the society were voted for the address, and its publication was requested. At the close of the President's address, Dr. C. H. Stowell of the University gave an exhibition of microscopical preparations of history. This was done by means of lime light, the objects being magnified and thrown upon a screen. The exhibition was very entertaining and instructive, and illustrative of the exceedingly valuable work done in that department in the University.

Capt. Allen was very happy in his brief address of welcome to the M. D. visitors who did Ypsilanti the honor of holding their seventeenth annual convention in our city.

Judging from the medical discussions at the opera house this week, the pathy of progress is leading in the van of all other pathies, at the present.

There is much credit due to the medical profession of this city for the manner in which they welcomed their brethren of the state, especially Drs. Owen and Post who had the matter in charge. The arrangements were admirable.

The Michigan Convention of M. D's in general intellectuality, distinguished and professional bearing do not differ materially from a convention of ministers of the gospel or D. Ds. There are not a few men of moral as well as mental power. Our earliest recollections being associated with the medical profession, our father a practicing physician of sixty years, and physicians often being visitors at his house, we have always felt a brotherly affection for members of the profession. We dropped in a little while Thursday morning and heard an interesting discussion on single and compound fractures, and the causes of non-union. It was a complete unmasking of the cruelty of prosecuting surgeons for failures of this kind.

Rev. Dr. Frisbie of St. James, Detroit preaches at St. Lukes to-morrow.

A guilty conscience takes offence and puts the coat right on. This is the case of a city publisher who noticed a sentiment in the COMMERCIAL that had no reference to him, his name not being mentioned and if he had been innocent would not have concerned him. The garment fitted so snugly however that he put it on. "The wicked flee when no man pursueth."

We will guarantee that not one in twenty who had an opportunity to read the late U. S. Supreme Court decision, including business men waded through it. Lawyers and those who are familliar with law precedents of course understood and relished the points made. Watson Snyder's chief point of interest was to ascertain if the decision was based upon his confession of judgment as Mayor. No allusion being made to this fact he was content. As for the rest he was well satisfied as to what the purport of the decision would be, and so were all our business men.

FIRES.—Tuesday evening an alarm was sounded. It proved to be the Tannery on Congress street. It orignated from the friction of the machinery and was soon extinguished. Wednesday night between 12 and 1 P. M., a dwelling house belonging to Mrs. Hosmer was consumed. Rev. C. A. Lamb who arose about midnight, saw a light in the house, but did not suspect the cause. Mrs. Winnie was away from home, all her household goods were burned. Mrs. H. had $300 insurance. This is the third loss incurred by her in a short time. Some rascal is thus punishing Mrs. H. a most estimable lady. It is a shame.

Induced very reluctantly to allude to some false statements, in fact slanders made by a neighboring publisher, we do so once for all. Mean while taking occasion to develop the mission and animus of this journal. Our readers may be assured that that under no provocation whatever shall we allude to this man or sheet again. We do not believe that the high mission of newspaper work is subserved by harping on personal matters. And besides in such controversies as in a street quarrel the unscrupulous and foul mouthed place the decent party at a disadvantage. Brazen effrontery and audacious falsehoods going a good ways with some people.

MARRIED.

JENKS—DENTON—On the 30th, of April by Rev. J. A. Elwood at the residence of the bride's mother, H. B. JENKS, M. D., and MISS KATIE J. DENTON, all of this city.

NEEDED ADVICE.

It is wonderful how much some folks know about other people's business They know so much that they can guess a lie or rather lie outright. This is the case with a young man last week who imagined a number of things in regard to the Editor of this paper and office, that had not even the the shadow of truth. It reminds us of another class of falsehoods this same publisher communicated to a brother publisher, R. A. Beal of Ann Arbor. That our property was loaded down with mortgages, and several other whoppers needless to recount. Accept our advice. It won't hurt you a particle. Be sure you know to be true what you publish in regard to your neighbors and you will not be guilty of sending slanders abroad, intended for mischief, but reacts upon the falsifier.

THE NEW ORGAN.

Every lover of good music is now given the opportunity to aid the M. E. church in the purchase of their new organ, and enjoy an evening of rich entertainment. At the opera house, Monday evening, May 22d, will appear Donavin's famous Tennesseans. Previous to this season they had given ninety-seven concerts in Chicago, and at the close of this season. 135, before the most intelligent and critical audiences, and in the largest and most conservative churches. The Cincinnatti Times-Star gives them this recommend:

"Donnavin's Famous Tennesseeans gave one of their remarkable concerts in St. Paul's M. E. church last night, and fairly captured the audience. To the cultured musician their singing is altogether as beautiful as that of the most celebrated vocalists of Italy or Germany, while to the average auditor their singing is more delightful than anything that is heard in a concert hall."

Admission 50, 35 and 25 cents. Sale of reserved seats at Dodge's jewelry store to commence Thursday morning.

A ROAD PROPOSED.

A petition numerously signed by the citizens of Superior has been circulated by Mr. T. Vanderwort, to secure an air line road from this city to the north part of Superior and to Salem. A link of only a mile and a half going between the two compartments of Frein's lake is required. It is claimed that this road well worked and gravelled would shorten the distance so that many families who now do their trading in Ann Arbor, would come to Ypsilanti. If so, Ypsilanti is vitally interested. On the other hand it is claimed that but very few parties would be benefitted, That it is only a half mile either way out of a direct line now. That it would about ruin a farm and that to fill up the go between and across Frein's lake would be a big and costly job. We understand that Mr. V. says that he will build a mile of the road for a dollar per rod. If so the expense would not be very great and this city could well afford to chip in. It places Mr. Wilber's farm, 100 acres on one side the road and eighty on the other. This being the case it seems to us that it would ultimately benefit him to the tune of at least $500,00. But perhaps we should think differently on taking an eye survey of the proposed road. Shortening and improving important highways are distinguished evidences of civilization.

CHARIOTS OF THE ALMIGHTY.

As we stated a couple of weeks since, having been detailed by the government to investigate the pathway, courses and phenomina of storms, terrible scourges, Sergeant John P. Finley has been traversing the track of the two destructive cyclones in this state. The most destructive one, of extraordinary length, he found began in the north-east of VanBuren county, town of Arlington; and swifter than a race horse, now in high air belching forth rain and hail, and then swooping down onto the earth, it demolished everything that opposed its progress. It was a furious monster, and when it struck the earth it tore like mad—went bounding and rebounding, now on earth and now in mid air. The people through Kalamazoo, Barry, Eaton, Ingham and Livingston counties began to think of the general judgement. It got completely out of breath in the township of White Lake, Oakland county. The other was only about 50 miles long and rnshed into Saginaw Bay. It is astonishing that only eight lives were lost, and Mr. Finley says that with an understanding of the known laws of the tornado cloud, six of the eight might have been saved. To-night, at the Seminary, we shall hear from Mr. Finley an account of these and other tornadoes. Judging from his book on this subject of storms—a most charming one—also his powers of description and knowledge of the facts, it will be a lecture of rare interest for old and young.

HOW TEMPERANCE PEOPLE GOT CAUGHT.

We have it from a reliable source, a bevy of gentlemen as an excuse for another paper, affirmed that the Sentinel and Commercial were so completely under temperance influences so radical that the saloons kicked them out. They wanted a neutral journal, one that would be welcomed in the saloons. It was indeed welcomed in all the saloons. But they owned they got more than they expected. To their surprise temperance people turned in and helped them. This fact gave them the idea that not a few temperance people were mere sentimentalists, and cared not for fundamental temperance. They would support a neutral paper on this subject as soon or sooner than one true blue. To their further surprise they found that when a lottery was inaugurated to keep up circulation and in violation of law this same temperance and religious sentiment passively if not actively, gave it their sanction, money and moral support. This may be true temporally, but in the long run principle comes out ahead, especially with men and women of principle, and in this progressive age this class must increase. We believe the tidal wave is setting in. We have the promise that when the enemy comes in like a flood the Lord raises up a standard against him.

CONGRESS.

May 4.—In the Senate Mr. Voorhees offered a resolution to appoint a special committee to inquire whether any corrupt or improper influence had been used, or sought to be used, on any senator in favor of the bill to indefinitely extend the bonded period for whisky. Mr. Voorhees said he offered it because his name had been connected with the matter. The resolution was discussed, and postponed, and a resolution by Mr. Windom, to investigate the matter of raising money in behalf of the whisky bill, was promised for to-morrow. The political disabilities bill was referred to the Judiciary Committee.

The House went into committee on the Tariff Commission bill. Mr. Kasson announced that he hoped for a vote Saturday. Conder, Goterhalk, Hatch, McLane and Morrison spoke against the bill.

The resolution offered by Mr. Windom for the appointment of an investigating committee of five to inquire whether any money has been raised, by contribution or otherwise, from parties in interest to promote the passage or defeat of the bill relating to distilled spirits in special bonded warehouses, and if so for what uses the money has been expended, was adopted without debate. The debate on the Court of Appeals bill was resumed to-day.

The House went into committee on the Tariff Commission bill. Messrs. Randall and Curtin favored the bill; Whitthorne opposed it. Mr. Tucker advocated tariff for revenue only, and opposed a commission. Mr. Kelley favored the pending measure. Mr. Randall offered amendments providing that the commission shall consist of two senators, three representatives and four civilian experts. At the evening session forty-five pension bills were passed.

May 8.—A bill was introduced for the relief of Fitz John Porter. The provisions are the same as the house bill. Bills were reported appropriating $300,000 for the extension of the executive mansion. Messrs. Windom, Hawley, Harrison, Cockrell and Pugh constituted the committee of investigation concerning the allegation of corruption in connection with the bonded distillery spirits bill.

In the house bills were introduced by Mr. Townshend to place the tax on salt used in curing pork and beef on the same basis as salt used in curing fish. By Mr. Calkins to aid in making further arctic exploration and detailing Master Lucien Young as commander of the expedition. It authorizes the secretary of the navy to purchase a vessel of proper size and structure for the expedition at a cost to not exceed $50,000 and appropriate $100,000 for the expenses of the expedition. The house preceeded to the consideration of the bill to enlarge the duties and powers of the department of agriculture. The speaker announced that during a temporary absence Mr. Burrows, of Mich., would occupy the chair.

May 9.—In the Senate, all the pending house bills donating condemned cannon for monumental and other purposes were passed. Mr. McDill introduced a bill for a wagon bridge across the Missouri between Council Bluffs and Omaha. The senate passed the house tariff commission bill—yeas, 25; nays, 19. Democrats voted with the Republican in the affirmative and two Republicans in the minority against the bill.

In the House, the bill enlarging the powers of the agricultural department was taken up. Mr. Dunn, offered an amendment providing for a division of forestry, the chief of which shall ascertain the annual amount of consumption, exports and importation of timber and other forest products, the probable supply for future wants, and the means best adapted for preservation and renewals of forests. Adopted.

May 10.—Senate bill was passed for the establishment of an assay office at Deadwood, D. T. The bill for intermediate appellate courts was proceeded with. Mr. Jones opposed the section limiting the appellate jurisdiction of the circuit courts and gave notice of an amendment thereto. Mr. Davis denied that the section would indicate any hardship, and urged its retention as essential to the effectiveness of the proposed system. He read a telegram from the bar association of New York indorsing the measure and incidentally disclaimed any especial response for the measure, though his experience on the bench, he said, convinced him of its utility, and value as a measure for the relief of the over-burdened dockets of the supreme court.

The house passed 172 to 7, without amendment, the bill creating the executive department, the bill creating the department of agriculture, which provides that the department shall be under the control of a secretary, who is an experienced and practical agriculturist, and establish departments of agricultural products, annual industry, lands and statistics. The conference report on the Indian appropriation bill was agreed to and the house went into committee on the appropriation bill.

FOREIGN.

The ex-Empress Eugenie, who has been staying at Lyons on her way back from Marseilles, was hooted at as she left her hotel for the railway station yesterday.

Forster, Secretary of Ireland, has given the house of commons his reasons for resigning that he strenuously objected to the release of imprisoned suspects unless they gave a public pledge to abstain from all opposition to the execution of the laws.

Lord Frederick Cavendish, the new Secretary for Ireland, and Under Sec'y Burke while strolling in Phœnix Park were assassinated. They had been engaged in business at Dublin Castle until dinner, after which they went for a walk in Phœnix Park. They were shot close to Chief Secretary's lodge, by two men who came up in a car and suddenly attacked the officials stabbing them both several times in the throat and breast. The victims struggled hard for life, and in the struggle became separated, their bodies being found some ten paces apart. The tragedy occurred about ten minutes after 7 o'clock Saturday evening, while it was yet broad day light.

The New York Herald says concerning the state affairs: The murder could not have happened at a more inauspicious moment for Ireland. She was enjoying a great victory. She had obtained more at a stroke than she had expected to obtain in the course of years. Mr. Gladstone was waiting to grant her almost any reasonable concessions. The crisis has now come. There can be no more temporizing, no more dalliance. Coercion, violence and martial law will all be useless. What has to be done must be done quickly and must be wholly radical in its nature. Every sentiment of justice and patroitism calls on Parnell to take the lead and show how Ireland can gain as much of her ends as are reasonable without making a compact with assassins.

Mr. Forster has been re-appointed chief secretary for Ireland.

Mr. Gladstone has resolved to modify his recently proposed policy; and it is rumored that coercion will be instituted, possibly at the point of the bayonet. The cowardly assassination has caused almost universal revulsion and sympathy has in many instances given place to indifference to the woes of Ireland. Parnell, Dillon and Davitt publish a manifesto adopted by a special Land League assembly at Westminster Palace Hotel, which in very forcible language calls upon Ireland to show in every possible manner detestation of so atrocious a deed. The manifesto closes as follows: "We feel that no act that has ever been perpetrated in our country during the exciting struggles of the past five years has so stained the name of hospitable Ireland as this cowardly and unprovoked assassination of a friendly stranger and that until the murderers of Cavendish and Burke are brought to justice that stain will sully our country's name."

Great distress is reported on Anticosta island. At Esquimaux Point 26 persons have died of scarlet fever and large numbers are reported on the verge of starvation.

Lady Cavendish has left London. Previous to her departure Mr. Gladstone called and both were greatly overcome during the interview. The Irish ladies of the Dublin Land League sent her a telegram expressing a hope that she did not believe that the Irish people were sunk so low as to murder one who had brought a peace offering to Ireland.

Geo. Otto Trevelyan has been appointed chief secretary for Ireland much to the gratification of Irishmen. The government offers $50,000 reward for the apprehension of the assassins. The London Times holds the land leaguers responsible for the crime. A large number of arrests have already been made.

Egypt is reported in a state of revolution.

The assassins of Cavendish and Burke remain unidentified. However, no additional arrests have been made of parties against whom suspicions of guilt were entertained.

May-Day.

When any particular day of the year makes a reputation it may consider itself in for a successful career through all coming ages. The first day of May was for centuries the occasion in Europe for a lavish display of flowers and a grand jubilation; even the Druids, who, according to tradition, were of anything but jolly temperament, used to lug wood to the tops of high hills and celebrate the eve of May by lighting huge bonfires.

These old time observances have passed away; when firewood is worth from eight to twelve dollars a cord no human being can be expected to express hilarity through the medium of a bonfire, nor should any general display of flowers be looked for at a season of the year when first class rosebuds command a dollar each. But old customs, like old wrongs, die hard, and so May-Day has survived. It exacts recognition even in New York, where sentiment generally has as hard a time as if it were a tramp. Our ancestors once danced around maypoles, and even the Puritan revolution in England did not discourage them. In New York, however, the merry old custom has for a century been discouraged by the fact that there were no poles to dance around. The original pole is no more, but the New Yorker finds a practical substitute in the cartrung of the period. Although he does not dance around this he is quite likely to dance in a rage of uncertainty when it, with its accompanying cart, fails to appear by noon of the day for which it was promised to be at the house by daylight. Our mediæval ancestors used to expect delicious slumber after their May-Day exercises, and so do modern men, but in the case of the celebrator of May-Day to-day there is always a lively uncertainty as to whether he will get his bed up in time for a solid nap, or whether he will be obliged to woo capricious slumber on the mixed debris of his old home with a section of carpet for a coverlid and a faithful coal scuttle for a pillow. In olden times May-Day always implied delightful weather. How every victim of the moving mania wishes that it might do so now! It is no slight detriment to full enjoyment of the day to be unable to know in advance whether to wear a sealskin cap or a half-ounce felt; whether to first put up a stove or leave an order for the iceman; or worst of all, whether the truckman's tarpaulins are sound enough to save the family effects from the rain that is not unlikely to fall.

But, in spite of all the indicated changes from the good old ways, May-Day is what it is, and the New Yorker must take it as he finds it until he becomes sensible and prosperous enough to own the house he lives in. Then, although he may not participate in the annual spring turnout, he will get far more fun out of the antics of other people than he ever could find in celebrating the day as most of his neighbors do.

THE FARM.

SPRING NOTES FROM A BATTLE-FIELD.

The farmer and the farmer's wife
A sitting hen defied;
And, for a while, glad vict'ry seemed
To crown the aggressor's side.

The coach-house was the battle-field,
And Biddy's will was firm
Within its sacred precincts there
To serve her little term.

What though they shut the wood-shed door,
And showed her there a nest,—
Filled to the very brim with eggs—
To soothe her ruffled breast?

This Biddy knew a thing or two;
And, from a window high,
Back to her chosen nest again
Triumphantly did fly!

'Twas shoo! here, and shoo! there;
And shriek, and squawk, and flutter,
Until that peaceful farm was filled
With noises just too utter!

The angry farmer lost his wits,
The wife her apron shook;
And all because this setting hen
Had such determined look.

They poked her! they punched her!
They breathed in accents dire!
But yet that fussy feathered fowl
Her purpose kept entire.

And even though a wagon-pole
Was brandished at a pinch,
They could not scare nor terrify
Nor budge that hen an inch.

At last the farmer charged the hen,
But punched a mild-eyed cow,
Who poked the horse, who kicked the pig,
Who raised a dreadful row.

The pig broke out and found his way
Down to the garden bed;
And followed on his martial heels
The horse with frantic tread.

They visited the rows of beans,
The hills of early corn,
The hot-beds and the lettuce beds,
And left them all forlorn.

And all that day, and all next week,
The farmer did repair.
His wood-shed door is fastened still,
But Biddy is not there.

Look for her in the carriage-house,
Where, prickly as a thistle,
That sitting hen is sitting yet,
In one perpetual bristle.

The farmer and the farmer's wife
At last have had to yield,
And Biddy sits victorious
Upon that battle-field.

Oh, fickle goddess Victory,
To thus desert us men,
And give the plume of conqueror
To keeping of a hen!

Dear me! what are we coming to,
To thus disgrace our sires?
What shall we tell posterity
If any one inquires?

Advance in Beef.

With the extraordinary impetus given to cattle raising in the far west and southwest during the past decade, the present scarcity in the supply of cattle available for beef purposes, which has led to the recent advance of twenty-five per cent. in the prices of beef, is quite unexpected to the average citizen. For such cattle as are fitted for market the present is an unusually good time for realizing, since the present range of prices can be but temporary. Grass-fed beef will soon arrive on the market, while high prices of meat also have a tendency to bring forward cattle, which under ordinary circumstances would be held back for fattening and marketing later in the season. Had it not been for the mild weather of the past winter and the excellent feed which has prevailed in most of the great grazing sections, the present scarcity of fine cattle would have been of still greater severity. Next fall increased supplies of beef may be looked for. Returns from the ranchmen say that the winter in Texas and the southwest, and even in Montana, has been very favorable, and the losses in cattle unusually light. It should also be remembered that extreme prices for beef checks its consumption among the masses of the people, who are forced to substitute fish, eggs, beans, pork and mutton. Again, the demand for beef during the summer months is much lighter than in the winter season.

One of the most potent factors in the present enhanced cost of beef is the extensive export trade in American cattle and meat. In 1880 280,032 cattle, valued at $16,877,382 were shipped abroad, and in 1881 215,762 head, valued at $10,590,850. Upwards of 40,000 tons of American beef were imported into England last year, at a cost of about ten cents per pound. In the seven years between 1874 and 1881 the decrease in value of the live stock of Great Britain and Ireland showed $22,620,180 in cattle, $69,876,600 in sheep and $2,905,000 in pigs, hence with an ever increasing population, especially among the meat-consuming classes, the deficiency in home supplies must be made up by imported meat. America seems to be the most natural source of supply, as, notwithstanding the great ado made over the shipment of Australian beef, recent attempts have turned out failures, and the United States need have no fears from either Australian or South American competition. As the Australian beef had to be transported through the tropical heat of the Indian Ocean, it was necessary to freeze it, and the result was it became tainted and unfit for food shortly after its arrival. The American beef is carried across the cool Atlantic in refrigerators which are kept a few degrees above freezing point, and the beef, when exposed for sale, will keep as long as it will in our own market. The American beef generally reaches the English markets in fifteen days at the latest after slaughtering. As illustrating the immense drain the export trade is continually making upon our live stock we may mention that 3033 cattle, 7120 quarters of beef and 2334 carcasses of mutton were shipped abroad per steamers last week.

The enormous additions to our population, both from natural increase and from unprecedented immigration, adds largely to the demands for beef for home consumption. It is quite probable that from these two sources combined an addition will be made to our population during the current year exceeding 2,000,000 souls, demanding a corresponding increase in the daily food supply. The magnitude of the business transacted in a few of our leading cattle markets shows a most remarkable growth in this industry. It is only twelve years since beef cattle were first shipped to eastern markets from the region west of the Missouri, and now Chicago receives 28,000 to 30,000 head per week. Forty years ago 200 head of cattle were sufficient to meet the wants of the Boston beef market for a week, yet now, in addition to heavy supplies of dressed meat from the west, between 3000 and 3500 head of cattle are required to supply Brighton and Watertown markets. New York city markets consume weekly receipts of beeves averaging 13,500 head to say nothing of 4000 veals, 30,000 sheep and 25,000 swine. The trade in dressed beef interferes with the shipment of cattle, the use of refrigerator cars giving certainty and despatch to the industry. Five years ago Chicago shipped 33,381,508 pounds of dressed beef. Last year her shipments exceeded 65,000,000 pounds. The advance in the price of beef has been very marked of late and, as compared with one year ago, export steers, worth at Chicago $6 per 100 pounds, are now worth $7.25 to $7.85. Beef cattle at Boston, worth 8 to 8½ cents per pound dead weight last year, are now selling at 10 to 10½ cents. Prime cattle, quoted at New York in 1881 at $11.25 to $11.50 per hundred, are now held at $13.25 to $13.50 dressed weight. The future price of beef in this country must depend largely upon the demand abroad, as well as the abundance or scarcity of cattle in the great west.

Treatment of Bones.

Bones accumulate on every farm, and a hunt for them will bring out many more than one would expect to find. When properly treated, they furnish very valuable food for growing plants. Whole bones, as they are thrown out from the kitchen, are so slowly decomposed, that they are of little use, unless applied very largely. They need to be broken up or made fine in some way that the large amount of phosphoric acid, etc., contained in them may be available. It is not practicable for ordinary farmers to have bone mills, and the next best thing is to break them up somewhat with an axe or heavy hammer, and mix them with unleached ashes; keeping the heap moist enough so the alkali will "eat" them, and render the bones soft. The bones thus treated will crumble to fine pieces when dried, and are then ready to be spread upon the land. Every farmer should see that all bones are made into a valuable home-made fertilizer.—American Agriculturist.

PROFIT IN BLACK WALNUTS.—The smartest Texan, and, in fact, the smartest farmer, I have ever met, is old Sim Graves. After Mr. Graves had shown me his cattle and cotton, he took me over to see his woods. "Well, what of it?" I said, as he pointed to a ten-acre forest.

"What of it? Why, them's black walnuts, sir. Ten acres of 'em. Planted 'em myself ten years ago. See, they're nine inches through. Good trees, eh?" And sure enough there were ten acres of hand-planted black walnut trees. They stood about——feet apart, 200 to the acre—in all, 2,000 trees.

"Well, how did you get your money back?" I asked. "Black walnuts are worth $2.50 a bushel, ain't they? I'll get 400 bushels this year. That's $1,000. A hundred dollars on acre is good rent for land worth $15 an acre, ain't it?"

"Well, what else?" I inquired, growing interested. "The trees," continued Mr. Graves, "are growing an inch a year. When they are twenty years old they will be nineteen inches through. A black walnut tree nineteen inches through is worth $25. My 2,000 trees ten years from now will be worth $50,000. If I don't want to cut them all, I can cut half of them, and then raise a bushel of walnuts to the tree—that is, get $2,500 a year for the crop. Two hundred and fifty dollars an acre is a fair rent for $15 land, ain't it?"

BILL NYE ON THE COD.—This tropical bird very seldom wings his way so far west as Wyoming. He loves the sea-breezes and humid atmosphere of the Atlantic ocean, and when isolated in this mountain clime, pines for his native home. The codfish cannot sing, but is prized for his beautiful plumage and seductive odor. The codfish of commerce is devoid of digestive apparatus, and is more or less permeated with salt. The codfish ball is made of the shattered remains of the adult codfish mixed with the tropical Irish potato of commerce. The codfish has a great wealth of glad unfettered smile. When he laughs at anything, he has a wide waste of mirth and back teeth. The Wyoming codfish is generally dead. Death in most cases is the result of exposure and loss of appetite. No one can look at the codfish of commerce and not shed a tear. Far from home with his system filled with salt, while his internal economy is gone, there is an air of sadness and homesickness and briny hopelessness about him that no one can see unmoved. Friends may visit us and go away to be forgotten with the advent of a new face, but the cold, calm, silent corpse of the codfish cannot be forgotten. Its chastening influence permeates the entire ranch. That is why we say it is a solemn thing to take the life of a codfish. We would pass him by a thousand times, no matter how ferocious he might be, rather than take his life and have our once happy home haunted forever by his unholy presence.

Even if a boy is always whistling "I want to be an angel," it is just as well to keep the preserved pears on the top shelf.

RECIPE FOR WASHING.

Soak the clothes over night in clear water, or put them to boil without soaking, with the following mixture added to the water: To one quart of soft soap take one tablespoonful of kerosene oil, mix well, and to three pails of soft water take a large teacupful, or half a pint of the mixture. Let them boil ten or fifteen minutes. Rinse in blued water, after rubbing them in one suds of soft water. This is good for prints, too, and will save half the labor of washing, without boiling first. Hard soap can be used instead of soft if preferred. VILLETTE.

LEMON CREAM PIE.

Juice and grated rind of one lemon, yolks of three eggs, five tablespoonfuls of sugar, a small lump of butter, three tablespoons flour, one small cup sweet milk. When done beat the whites to a stiff froth; pour over the top evenly; return to the oven to brown slightly.

CONVENIENT LEMON PIE.

For three pies take one quart of water, one and a half cups sugar, one cup bread crumbs, one teaspoonful of extract of lemon (or to suit the taste), five eggs. Beat the whites separately with a little sugar, putting on after the pie is baked, replacing in the oven to brown slightly.

LEMON BUTTER FOR TARTS.

Lemon butter is excellent for tarts. Take one pound pulverized white sugar, whites of six eggs and yolks of two; three lemons, including grated rind and juice. Cook twenty minutes over a slow fire, stirring all the time.

ORANGE PIE.

Grate the peel of one fresh orange, take the juice and pulp of two large oranges; add to them one cup of sugar and the beaten yolks of three eggs. Mix one cup of sweet milk with the whites of the eggs beaten to a stiff froth. Bake in puff paste.

Good and Bad Cooking.

House-keepers or cooks do a vast amount of mischief by the perversion of taste, and the subsequent derangement of the stomach. Making sour bread is one of their most common sins. Many do not know when bread is sour, and supply it with a distinctly acid flavor, believing that it is very "nice," because it is so very light. They suppose bread is sour only when all the vinous firmentation has changed to the acetic. Bread is sour as soon as it tastes at all sour. This may go on increasing, but to the best bread-maker the least acid flavor is a source of grief. Really good bread is positively sweet, and will be just as light and spongy as the nicest sour bread, if good material and proper care are used. In families where the taste is perverted by sour bread, other abominations are usually tolerated—biscuit tasting either of excess of soda, or bitter buttermilk; vegetables seasoned with bad butter, pie-crust strongly flavored with lard or tallow; cake tasting of rancid butter, etc. Along with this diet naturally goes a deal of spicing to cover the bad flavors, or much washing down with hot, strongly seasoned coffee or tea. Sour bread is never good in milk, and children prefer to lunch on pie or cake, rather than on sour bread and milk or butter. The whole family eats as little bread as possible, and the butcher's bill is very heavy—and they call all this "good living!" Just count the empty bottles labelled "Bitters" or "Blood Purifier," that lie around the house, where sour bread or "good living" (as generally understood), either or both hold sway!

The plainest food can be made to taste very good simply by selecting, preparing, and preserving it. Those who eat food selected and prepared with chief reference to its nourishing qualities, eating moderately to gratify a natural appetite, instead of a morbid craving, really enjoy eating more than the gormand or glutton, whose chief pleasure is in eating, and who must have everything fixed up "good," with condiments or hot sauces, and washed down with stimulants. He becomes incapable of detecting and appreciating delicate flavors, and so wears out the sense of taste, that it is hard work to find anything that he can relish; while a dish of good bread and good unskimmed milk, seems very delicious to people with undepraved appetites. Recently I heard a little girl who does not like bread and milk, say of a piece of bread and butter, that "no cake could taste better!" The bread was made of good whole wheat flour, stirred up with nothing but water, and baked in gem irons. It was spread with creamery butter, and I think any one to be pitied who would not like the taste of such gems and such butter. Thorough chewing adds to the pleasure of the sense of taste, this taste resides in the soft palate and its arches. One common way of abusing the sense of taste is, by eating fast with very slight chewing, so that the food is not retained in the mouth long enough to give the nerves of taste a chance to fairly taste the quality of the food eaten. But for this rapid eating, and washing down with agreeably flavored drinks, much that is usually eaten would be rejected as either bitter or tasteless.—American Agriculturist.

ORIGIN OF NAMES OF FABRICS.—Many kinds of dry-goods possess old English names which are used, more or less corrupted, throughout the world. The origin of these old names are given by Sir Geo. Birdwood as follows: Damask is from the city of Damascus; satin from Zaytown, in China; calico from Calcutta; and muslin from Mosul. Buckram derived its name from Bochara; fustian comes from Fostat, a city of the Middle Ages, from which the modern Cairo is descended. Taffeta and tabby from a street in Bagdad. Cambric is from Cambrai. Gause has its name from Gaza; baize from Bajac; dimity from Damietta, and jeans from Jaen. Drugget is derived from a city in Ireland, Drogheda. Duck, from which Tucker street in Bristol is named, comes from Torque, in Normandy. Diaper is not from D'Ypres, but from the Greek diaspron, figured. Velvet is from the Italian vellute, wholly (Latin, vellus—a hide or pelt). Shawl is the Sanscrit sala, floor, for shawls were first used as carpets and tapestry. Bandanna is from an Indian word, meaning to bind or tie, because they are tied in knots before dyeing. Chintz comes from the Hindoo word chett. Delaine is the French "of wool."

Sir Sidney Waterlow's American Wife.

A cable dispatch received from Paris states that Miss Margaret Hamilton, formerly of this city, was married to Sir Sidney Waterlow, Baronet, at the English Embassy in the French capital. As Miss Margaret Hamilton, the now lady Waterlow. is widely known in society circles of San Francisco, where she has acquired a reputation for brilliancy and wit, as well as drawn around her a large circle of devoted friends, who will rejoice to hear of her union with the sometime Lord Mayor of London. The groom has been married before and has a faimily by his first wife, and it was indirectly through his daughter, Miss Hilda Waterlow, attending the same school as the daughter of General Williams of this state, and the friendship which grew up between them, that the wedding in Paris has resulted. When Gen. Williams visited his daughter in England, introducing an American lady as his daughter's chaperon, naturally the whole party shared the attention and hospitality of the Baronet. Consequently, last autumn when Sir Sidney arrived on this coast, some of those who had been so handsomely entertained by him while in England, gave him, his young daughters and son, a hearty welcome.

The acquaintance of Miss Hamilton and Sir Sidney dates from that period. As the guests of the family of Charles Crocker Miss Hamilton and her sister were en route for Monterey at the time Sir Sidney Waterlow was passing over the road in his private car, accompanied by Gen. Williams. It was on the cars that he first met Miss Hamilton, the gentleman's manner proving conclusively he was attracted in no ordinary degree. Subsequent horse-back riding, bowling and billiard-playing, in which Miss Hamilton was an adept, and the charming faculty of entertaining both young and old, made an impression which culmihated in a formal proposal of marriage at a dinner-party given under the hospitable roof of Mr. Crocker. On the subsequent arrival of Miss Hamilton and Mrs. George Hearst in England, they were met at Liverpool by Sir Sidney and informed that a suite of rooms at the hotel was in waiting for them, but as a special favor to himself and particular gratification to his daughters, who had met Miss Hamilton in California, he begged to be allowed the pleasure of entertaining the ladies. At last Mrs. Hearst consented, agreeing with Sir Sidney that by acceding to his invitation the family would have a better opportunity to know the lady upon whom he had placed his choice In due time the Baronet declared to his family and relatives his intentions regarding Miss Hamilton. The news was received with the best of feeling, and resulted in all interested making a special business of tendering congratulations.—San Francisco Chronicle

Cuticura
THE NEW BLOOD PURIFIER
Resolvent

I will now state that I made a miraculous cure of one of the worst cases of skin disease known. The patient is a man forty years old; had suffered fifteen years. His eyes, scalp and nearly his whole body presented a frightful appearance. Had the attention of twelve different physicians, who prescribed the best remedies known to the profession, such as iodide potassium, arsenic, corrosive sublimate, sarsaparilla, etc. Had paid $500 for medical treatment with but little relief. I prevailed upon him to use the CUTICURA RESOLVENT internally, and the CUTICURA and CUTICURA SOAP externally. He did so, and was completely cured. The skin on his head, face and many other parts of the body, which presented a most loathsome appearance, is now as soft and smooth as an infant's, with no scar or trace of the disease left behind. He has now been cured twelve months. Reported by
F. H. BROWN, ESQ., Barnwell, S. C.

SCROFULA SORE.
Rev. Dr.——in detailing his experience with the CUTICURA REMEDIES, said that through Divine Providence one of his parishioners was cured of a scrofulous sore, which was slowly draining away his life, by the CUTICURA RESOLVENT internally, and CUTICURA and CUTICURA SOAP externally. The poison that had fed the disease was completely driven out.

ECZEMA.
Sixteen months since an eruption broke out on my leg and both feet, which turned out to be Eczema, and caused me great pain and annoyance. I tried various remedies with no good results until I used the CUTICURA RESOLVENT internally and CUTICURA and CUTICURA SOAP externally, which entirely cured me so that my skin is as smooth and natural as ever.

CUTICURA.
THE CUTICURA TREATMENT, for the cure of Skin, Scalp and Blood Diseases, consists in the internal use of CUTICURA RESOLVENT, the new blood purifier, and the external use of CUTICURA and CUTICURA SOAP, the great skin cures. Good Will to Man—Onward and Upward.

SATURDAY, May 13, 1882.

The calamity in Ireland, the result of communism gone to seed is terrible. But it ought not and we believe will not deter the leading, reflecting mind of Englishmen and the government from continuing in the proposed needed reforms for the relief of that sadly crushed and broken hearted people.

One of our leading and most respected citizens says "he was glad the decision in regard to bonded indebtedness has gone against us, on account of its lesson upon our boys. Successful repudiation would have been exceedingly damageing upon their characters as future business men. Let them learn to be careful what agreements they make, but once entered into learn to be scrupulously honest in fulfilling them."

CONTRARY TO PUBLIC POLICY AND A REMARKABLE HISTORY.

The following from the decision of the United States Court is a squelcher on our Supreme Court in pronouncing the aid law unconstitutional. We call especial attention to the last clause.

We remark in passing that the doctrines of People vs. Salem were, when announced, in direct conflict with those previously promulgated as well by this court, as by the highest courts of a large majority of the states. It was said by Mr. Justice Clifford, speaking for the court, in Rogers vs. Burlington, 3 Wall., 663, decided in 1865, that the rule that the legislature, in the absence of the constitutional prohibitions, could authorize municipalities to aid in the construction of railways, owned and managed by private corporations, pervaded the jurisprudence of the United States. We will not, at this late day, enter upon the vindication of that rule. And we may add, that under the later doctrines announced by the Supreme Court of Michigan, it is difficult to perceive how railroads can be regarded as public highways, subject, in the interest of the public, to governmental control and regulation.

Now then how came our State Supreme Court to pronounce our aid law unconstitutional and say to the people you shall not aid a measure to promote local improvement even if you want to. The Legislature may vote away your money for public improvements that don't concern you. The dear people shall not have the right in matters that concern them. The influences that induced that decision were unique and might not be brought to bear again in a thousand years. The Court consisted of four Judges. By a strange coincidence three of those Judges were in a narrow range, on the corners of a triangle, Ann Arbor, Detroit, and Monroe. Toledo lent its influence to what was termed the air line running on a bee line through Ypsilanti and connecting with the Peer Marquette at Holly. Ann Arbor was struggling to have the road diverted to that point. Monroe wanted to be the terminus of the extension of the Peer Marquette. Detroit was then in the sulks and exceedingly jealous of Toledo. This Air Line was a sure thing. Toledo had voted a liberal sum. Every town including this city, from the Ohio line to Holly had done the same thing. The history of securing this aid is a remarkable one. Hon. S. M. Cutcheon, and L. D. Norris were prominent actors. In thirty days the road would have been under way and in less than six months the trains would have been running. When lo! a thunder clap from a clear sky startled us and knocked us into worse than printer's pi. The fragments of this kind of pi can be gathered up. But there was not a grease spot left of the Toledo, Ypsilanti and Holly Air Line. The decision in regard to Salem's bogus bonds was hurried up and without a doubt to kill this project. The Judges representing humilliated Ann Arbor, envious Detroit and wailing Monroe were no doubt honest men. But it is a marvel, that just then these Judges should have been located at these points and a bigger marvel that the three should all have so harmoniously agreed. While Judge Graves, out side the circle and representing a constituency as vitally interested as we were in Ypsilanti should have given an able dissenting opinion.

As we stated at the beginning of this article, such a remarkable coincidence of locality, and of selfish interests would not probably occur again in a thousand years. The three Judges were of course all honorable men. But that decision was the biggest kind of a God send to Ann Arbor, Detroit and Monroe, and a squelcher upon Ypsilanti. Had not that decision been made the Ann Arbor and Northern R. R. would never have been built. The Peer Marquette extension to Holly would never have seen daylight. The Butler road would have fared the same. There never were better and wiser or more comprehensive plans inaugurated to build up a city than those involving the building of the D. H. and S. W. the Toledo, Ypsilanti and Holly Air Line roads. But the best laid plans in this uncertain and changeable world often come to nought.

What is Behind It?

Dr. David Kennedy of Rondout, N. Y., Proprietor of the great medicine, called "Favorite Remedy," would have but little confidence to recommend the public to buy and use it if his own name were not behind it. But the fact that he has staked his reputation upon it ought to be, and is, better the than a thousand cheep certificates—in the opinion of the people. If you are sick with any complaint of the Blood, Kidneys, or liver, invest One Dollar in the "Favorite Remedy" and it will speak for itself. 947-2-w

"Whate'er is done in anger ends in shame."

DISAPPOINTMENT ALL AROUND.

Several classes of men have evidently been very much shocked and astounded by the vigorous style in which the Star route robbers are being pushed to the wall. Messrs. Dorsey and Brady and their accomplices are doubtless no little amazed to find that the President has not concerned himself to carry out the promise of immunity which Gen. Garfield is said to have extended out of a full and grateful heart to the bold "worker" whom the chiefs of the Republican party united to glorify for having carried Indiana.

It is, we admit, a very singular spectacle, this, of a Republican Administration employing distinguished legal talent to execute public justice upon a set of men who stand high in the organization of the party, and who are known to have contributed freely to the campaign funds, which secured the votes of two pivotal States, and what is still more important, are known to possess secrets of vital concern to the party managers. But the country nevertheless enjoys that spectacle. Does anybody suppose this would have been the case had the Blaine Administration continued? Weakness, cowardice, and vacillation characterized its conduct in this matter from first to last. Dorsey went off on a clear understanding that he was not to be hurt. Now the indictments are sustained; bail forfeited; bench warrants issued; and a strong probability of substantial justice takes the place of doubts and sneers on the one hand and bold defiance on the other.

Mr. MacVeagh went out avowedly because he would not trust Arthur in this "reform" business of Garfield. What has he to say in the present aspect of the cases? What would he have to say should Brewster, Bliss, Merrick, and Ker land the alleged robbers inside the penitentiary.—N. Y. Sun.

This is the glory of the Republican party that it punishes its own rascals. This thing was unheard of under Democratic administration.

A MONUMENT TO JOHN D. PIERCE.

The Marshall Statesman informs us that at the memorial services in that city it was decided to erect a monument over the grave of Rev. John D. Pierce. It is desired that all the children in the State and others favorably disposed assist, so that the monument will "truly express the love and veneration held for deceased by the children and friends of the public schools."

Superintendent Glenn of Marshall is Secretary of the Association. No doubt the children, teachers and others in this city will cheerfully assist.

We cheerfully copy from the Statesman.

TO THE TEACHERS AND PUPILS OF MICHIGAN.

The deceased was an ardent lover of Michigan, of her institutions and her people. Surely his warmest admirers and personal friends lived in Michigan, and his dying request was that his body be buried in her soil, and near the graves of those who shared his burdens of pioneer life." His remains are now in the city cemetery of Marshall, where the appreciation and patrotism of Michigan's teachers and pupils will not permit them to remain in common obscurity. The school houses and educational institutions of our state are monuments of his good work for us, and surely the inmates of these are endowed with a gift of appreciation sufficient to inspire the giving of some tribute to his memory. Therefore, through each city superintendent or through the secretary of each board of examiners, we appeal to each teacher and through the teachers to each pupil of our community to contribute something, be it much or little, to the erection of a suitable monument over the remains of their common benefactor. Contributions should be sent through the hands of your superintendent or secretary of examiners when convenient. otherwise they may be sent directly to Mr. Deville Hubbard, Treasurer of Monument Fund, Marshall, Mich.

Respectfully,
CHARLES T. GORHAM,
T. W. HALL,
GEO P. GLENN.

The following letter from the state superintendent of instruction is an indorsement of the work engaged in by the Marshall committee:

LANSSING, April 29, 1882.

Prof. &eo. P. Glenn, Marshall, Mich.:

DEAR SIR.—Your favor of the 27th is at hand, and I am glad to learn that steps are to be taken to show, in so fitting a manner, an appreciation of the distinguished services of the late Rev. John D. Pierce. His self-denying efforts in the cause of popular education, his marked ability, clear foresight and great zeal, entitle him to the grateful remembrance of every citizen of our state, since all are reaping the benefits of his labors. I send herewith the office copy of the city and village superintendents and principals. * * * *

Wishing you every success in the undertaking now in hand, I am,

Respectfully yours,

taught their daughters that "a stitch in time saves nine." A pill in time saves not only nine, but oftimes and incalculable amount of suffering as well. An occasional dose of Dr. Pierce's Pellets (Little Sugar-coated Pills), to cleanse the stomach and bowels, not only prevents diseases but often breaks up sudden attacks, when taken in time. Mr. Herndon, a former law parnner of Abraham Lincoln, wrote a biography of the martyr President, in which he made representations of his religious character which were not sustained by facts. But the sad facts of Mr. Herndon's life are not exhausted by his treatment of Lincoln's. It is now said that he is a pauper and has been made such by strong drink. Christianity may save a man from taking the downward road to ruin; but infidelity cannot save even a man of acute legal mind and large reputation for ability as a lawyer. What, then can it do for men of ordinary mind?

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done thousands of women more good than the medicines of many doctors. It is a positive cure for all female complaints. Send to Lydia E. Pinkham.

If only the right start is made in the long journey of life! Only the good road chosen, and pursued even to the end. A wrong beginning is like a mistaken traveler, going in the opposite direction from the right one, there is no alternative but to retrace his steps at any sacrifice. There is a wrong and a right road, all through life, and if we start on the right one, it is pretty certain to be kept to the end, and it often leads up to the heights of prosperity and honor, just as the opposite tends down the sunless slope of adversity and misery.

Extract from the decision of the U. S. Court.

Of the bonds here in suit, Taylor became the purchaser, for a valuable consideration, in the year 1877. He was aware at the time of his purchase, of the beforementioned decision of the Supreme Court of Michigan, adjudging municipal aid to railroad corporations to be forbidden by law, and bonds issued therefor to be invalid. But, it is to be presumed, he was also aware that this court, affirming the judgment of the Circuit Court of the United States, sitting in that state, had at a subsequent period and long before his purchase, distinctly refused to follow the later decisions of the state court, and had adjudged the act of March 22, 1869, to be in conformity with the fundamental law of Michigan. The present case then appears to be this: Testing the rights and obligations of the parties by the law of the state as declared by this court, and as declared and acted upon by all the departments of the state government, at and before the time when the railroad company entered upon the execution of its contract with the city, we should be obliged to reverse the judgment of the court below.

This is just the fact in the case, Moses Taylor knew definitely, in fact he could not judge otherwise that upon plain English law the bonds were a safe investment. That the U. S. Court would not follow a decision made by our State Supreme Court after the bonds were earned. The decision of a Court cannot in deciding upon legislative enactments be retroactive and annihilate the just earnings of individuals or corporations. A little knowledge of the facts and a little reasoning in regard to the basis which induced Moses Taylor to invest in our bonds would have saved us an expensive litigation and quite a pile of interest money.

A commercial traveller writes that the prohibitory law in Kansas is "every day growing more popular." He was writing from Fort Scott; and there, he says, "every liquor dealer has been driven out of the business. Eighteen cases have been before the court, and 17 convictions have been secured. Eleven of these trials have put over $1,000 into the school fund. In six, the saloonists paid the costs, and have given their unequivocal allegiance to the law. What is true here is also true of 16 other county seats that I have visited." Gov. St. John has stood by the law; and the writer asserts that he will be renominated, and elected by a heavier majority than ever before. Kansas may be able to work out the problem of prohibition to the satisfaction not only of herself but that of other states.—Post and Tribune.

Mr. Blaine has started the political gossips on a new line. He has dropped a remark that he might be in Europe within a short time and now they are all saying, "What does it mean?" The Inter Ocean thinks if he goes that London and Paris will see a man that can outtalk any statesman in Europe, and that his conversation will challenge "the admiration of the most polished conversationalists," and suggests that a "stenographic Boswell" should go along so that the "world may be entertained instead of a fortunate few." Suppose the world should receive him with the eclat that it did Grant! The statesmen of Europe will find in Blaine the superior of Grant as they measure men. Blaine cannot visit Derby and tell all about the qualities of the kings and queens of the turf; but such men as Gladstone will sit at his side and listen with wrapt attention to what he may say about how to govern the people and the glory that may be in store for the great American Republic.

A person not a hundred miles away, attended church service on a recent Sabbath, and took down in short-hand the hymn as sung by the choir. The result was as follows:

Waw-kaw, swa, daw aw waw,
Thaw saw, thaw law aw waw,
Waw kaw, tsw, thaw raw-vaw-vaw braw
Aw thaw raw-jaw-saw aw.

He subsequently ascertained that this was the verse given out:

Little Workers.—"I am a little fellow, what can I do?" exclaimed Charlie, when his good mother was pleading for the temperance cause.

"You can sign the pledge and stick to it," answered his mother.

"So can anybody," responded Charlie, "but that is not much. I thought you meant work."

"Well that is the beginning of good work in the temperance cause," continued his mother. "No person could do much in this cause unless he should first sign the pledge and keep it, and that you can do. So far you can do just as much a man; and your example may influence another boy to 'touch not, taste not, handle not,' as the example of grown people will influence other grown people to do right."—Rev. William M. Thayer.

How to Save.

All hard workers are subject to bilious attacks which may end in dangerous illness. Parker's Ginger Tonic will keep the kidneys and liver active, and by preventing the attack save much sickness, loss of time and expense. Delay at such times means danger.—Detroit Press. See other column. May

Money for a Rainy Day.

"For six years my daughter was sick from kidney and other disorders. We had used up our savings on doctors, when our dominie advised us to try Parker's Ginger Tonic. Four bottles effected a cure, and as a dollar's worth has kept our family well over over a year, we have been able to lay by money again for a rainy day."—A Poor Man's Wife. May

AUGUSTA.

Some of the young men of Augusta would like another war in order to decimate the 220 youth of military age in that peaceful town.

Augusta reports eight deaths during the past year. Old age claimed two; unknown, two; heart disease, dropsy, consumption, and tumor, each one. This loss is balanced by eighteen births, seven males and eleven females.—Citizen.

NEWCOMB ITEMS.

The warm weather the first part of the week makes the farmers all feel happy. The wheat crop looks splendid. The fruit crop is all right as yet.

Mrs. T. J. Sherman is very sick.—J. Webster childs is some better.—Mrs. Wines of Chelsea has been visiting her mother and sister here for the past week.—The temperance meeting at the school house last Wednesday evening was a success. Dr. Hall and Mr. Foote of Ypsilanti addressed the meeting. We say brothers come again—The Reform Club meets at Mrs. Brinnings on Saturday evening of this week let all the members be present.—William Ward is slowly improving since he came home. He looks quite fleshy but complains of being very weak.

From the Saline Observer.

"Dick" Garrison and Will Eddy of Ypsilanti, made their Saline friends a visit last Sunday. As their visits are not so frequent as of yore, we fear Saline has lost some of its "attraction" to them. How is it boys?

Milan Leader.

Monroe Co. S. S. Institute.

The principal exercise of the evening was the speech by Prof. L. McLouth, of Ypislanti. Subject: How may the Sunday school be made to rank in efficiency and requirements with the day school? The Prof. Handled the subject with care and deliberation, showing why and where they did not rank in efficiency with day schools.

From the Argus

After a stormy debate between state and local insurance agents, Tuesday, the latter were authorized to revoke the policies issued on the court house at ninety cents for three years, unless the committee were willing to advance the rate to one hundred per cent.

The supreme court affirmed a decision of Judge Harriman who made an allowance of $2 per week to the widow in the estate of the late Loren Moore of York, pending its settlement.

From the Courier.

The medics have been considerably excited for a week past over a jack-knife law suit. One young man, who has the name of being a quarrelsome fellow, lent his knife to medic No. 2, who, after using it, run it down another young man's shirt collar for safe keeping. When medic No. 3 went home he found the knife in one of his boots, and placed it, as a relic, among his collection of skulls and other anatomical specimens. Medic No. 1 then demanded his knife of medic N. 2, who referred him to medic No. 3, who claimed to know nothing about the lost jack-knife. Finally medic No. 3 was arrested and brought before one of our justices, who fined him for the value of the knife and costs, amounting to $4.60. The senior class of which medic No. 1 is a member, has banished him from its midst, and talk of tar and feathers is frequently heard among the more indignant members of the class.

The Baptist floral social was a success in every way. The floral display was fine and a large company was in attendance. The proceeds amounted to more than seventy dollars.

Register of Deeds, E. N. Gilbert, has received a large number of blank applications for "Michigan in the War." Any soldier wishing to obtain a copy of the same can do so by stepping into his office and filling out a blank. If every one is prompt all the books can be ordered at the same time, saving time and expense.

The total amount of liquor tax thus far paid in amounts to $16,035, and is distributed among the several towns and townships as follows; Ann Arbor city, $7,555; Ypsilanti city, $2,215; Manchester village, $2,000; Dexter, $1,400; Chelsea, $1,400; Bridgewater, $500; Lodi, $300; Scio, York and Lima, each $200; and Manchester township, $65.

It takes a committee of three aldermen just fifteen minutes to review the bonds of twenty-four saloonists and to report favorably on the same. The rest of the citizens are to know nothing about who the bondsmen are.

From the Dexter Leader.

The following will apply to Ypsilanti.

MR. EDITOR.—As a conservator of public morals, I would like to call your attention to the fact that many of the children and youth of this village are not pursuing the paths in which their fathers used to tread. In the good old times night was wont to be occupied as sleeping time, but in these last days it seems to be the custom for our boys and young men to find their pleasures away from home, and thus they are led to spend the earlier, and sometimes the latter part of the night in places where they ought not to be allowed to congregate at any time, either day or night. Probably the parents of these youths are not aware of the fact, and our "city fathers," of an ordinance that in positive terms forbids the practice to which I allude. My own boy does not meet with them, unless, perhaps, he gets out of the window after we have retired. Will not our parents see to it that their children are at home in good time at night, and, perhaps, save themselve and their children from future sorrow. A. PARENT.

We witnessed a very unusal exhibition on our streets yesterday afternoon. A young man who had been paid for one month's work by H. T. Phelps of Webster, came to town and imbibed a little more than was for the best interest of his intellectual manhood, and who believed in a just and proper distribution of this world's goods, got together some ten or fifteen of the little boys of our village, and got up a race between them. His plan was this: he placed in a hat on the top of a hitching post in front of Blanchard's hotel, a certain sum of money, and with considerable effort took the boys eight or ten rods from it, and after arranging them in line, gave the word go, the one getting there first to have the money. We witnessed but two races, the first was won by Boliver Daily, who got $1.15; the second by Mich. Dolan, who got $1.75, and with a pleasing look, the young man said, that was the fairest way he could dispose of his money.

Ann Arbor, May 1, 1882.

For weak lungs, spitting of blood, weak stomach, night sweats, and early stages of Consumption "Golden Medical Discovery" is specific. By druggists.

Colonel "Bob's" purifying infidelity does not prevent him from making a blackguard of himself on very slight provocation.

A timely use of Brown's Iron Bitters will strengthen the nerves and muscles with new life and vigor, and ward off many diseases that otherwise are sure to encroach upon a weak constitution.

Gen. Garfield said that when he met a ragged boy he felt like saluting him for "he knew the possibilities that existed under that tattered coat." Perhaps he had had experience with them.

Mr. Amos Bradley, Rochester, N. Y., says: "As a sure cure for nervous debility and general decay of the system, I can conscientiously recommend Brown's Iron Bitters as a medicine that will give prompt relief. I do this as a duty I owe to my fellowmen, being myself restored to perfect health."

The Lansing Republican gives a table showing the political result on supervisors at the recent election in sixty-two counties of Michigan. The total foots up 598 Republicans, 328 Democrats, 138 Greenbackers in 1882, against 595 Republicans, 326 Democrats and 139 Greenbackers in 1881.

Making a Raise.

John Hays, Credit, P. O., says that for nine months he could not raise his hand to his head through lameness in the shoulder, but by the use of THOMAS' ECLECTRIC OIL he was entirely cured.

Mr. Blaine always makes a controversy interesting—especially to the man on the other side. He is never for any long time on the defensive. He climbs over the wall and gives battle to the enemy on his own soil. His impetuosity reminds one of Col. Ingersoll's rather poetical description of him, as being "like an armed warrior, like a plumed knight" marching down the halls of the American congress to throw "his shining lance full and fair against the bazen foreheads of the defamers of his country and the maligners of his honor." These words had a special significance at Cincinnati in 1876 when, upon the very eve of the Republican convention, he had by an aggressive dash swept off the Mulligan letters in the face of the Democratic members of the house, all of whom, as well as some upon the other side, were anxious to catch him in a way to thwart his nomination for the presidency. The nomination failed, but for other reasons than those which were put forward at Washington.—Post and Tribune.

LONGFELLOW.

The cold wind seemed to sigh and moan
As we read Evangeline
With a sweet sadness in its tone,
Like "pleasure in a dream."

There seemed new pathos in the lines
Of Hiawath's song,
Still better than in former times,
Ringing out so sweet and strong.

And then we thought of muffled drums
In every heart thats beating
As every day the warning comes
That life is short and fleeting.

While musing at the close of day
His psalm of life was read.
As low sad voices came to say
Our Longfellow is dead. W. L.

THE JUBILEE SINGERS.

They have come to sing the Jubilee
From sunny lands by the sounding sea,
Bringing melody and joy to me.

Free seats reserved for great and small
And none are crowded to the wall,
They never let the curtains fall.

They never fail to come on time
They sing the song of Auld-lang-syne
And never ask a single dime.

They never enter a saloon
They always sing a good old tune
Where waters gleam and roses bloom.

They sing sweet notes to every one
Free as the light of summer sun
A grander chorus n'eer was sung.

You pay no quarter at the door
Their concert's never prove a bore
They never keep you till you snore.

The singing halls, from sea to sea
A million voices chant in glee
The whole nation hears the Jubilee.

Robin leads, high music bringing
The Thrush and Bobolink solos singing
Till every grove with glee is ringing.

What Happened to

MR. JOSEPH BEACH.

Stone in the Kidney Expelled after Using Dr. David Kennedy's "Favorite Remedy" About two Weeks.

One of the most remarkable cases that has ever been brought to the notice of the public is that of Mr. J. S. Beach, of Stone Bridge, Ulster Co. N. Y. Mr. Beach had suffered since Oct. 18th, 1874, from the presence of Calculus or Stone in the right Kidney. No less than seven physicians were employed at different times, to whom Mr. Beach paid hundreds of dollars for medical treatment, with only temporary relief for his agony.

By the urgent solicitations of his friends he was induced to try Dr. David Kennedy's "Favorite Remedy"—experienced a marked improvement from the first day he began to use the medicine: on the 15 of September he voided a stone as large as could be passed through the natural channel.

Mr. Beach concludes a long letter to Dr. Kennedy by saying: "It will always afford me pleasure to recommend the "Favorite Remedy" to those who may be suffering from difficulties of the kidneys and bladder, or any disorders arising from an impure state of the blood. The "Favorite Remedy" sold by all druggists. The Doctor's only address is Rondout, New York. 947-4-w

A restaurant placard says: "Our stews are milkfully intense and utterly oysterful.'

Dr. Pierce's "Favorite Prescription" perfectly and permanently cures those diseases peculiar to females. It is tonic and nervine, effectually allaying and curing those sickening sensations that effect the stomach and heart through reflex action. The back-ache and "dragging-down" sensations all disappear under the strengthening effects of this great restorative. By druggists.

What is the most wonderful animal in the farm yard? A pig, because he is killed and then cured.

The Elixir of Life.

That purely vegetable compound, BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS, may be justly termed the Elixir of Life. A pleasant and effective medicine; it imparts strength and vitality to the whole system. Price $1.

A man employed as porter in a Texas hotel lifted a piano not long ago, and carried it up one flight. He got hold of it in the darkness by mistake, thinking he was carrying the trunk of a boston drummer.

Hope on, Hope Ever,

No matter what the ailment may be, rheumatism, neuralgia, lameness, asthma, bronchitis—if other treatment have failed- hope on! go at once for THOMAS' ECLECTRIC OIL. It will secure you immediate relief.

Many Chinamen are employed in New York to take care of children. They make good nursery-maids, it is claimed, and never object to the amount of work imposed upon them. Besides these good qualities, he does not, like Bridget and Lena, flirt with the grocer's boy and the policeman on the corner.

Found at Last.

What every one should have, and never be without is THOMAS' ECLECTRIC OIL. It is thorough and safe in its effects, producing the most wondrous cures of rheumatism, neuralgia, burns, bruises, and wounds of every kind.

A Franklin street man awoke on Saturday night to hear some one on his stoop. He went out and caught the intruder, a stranger. "Who are you?" demanded the householder. "I cannot tell a lie," replied the stranger, in a thick voice. "I am Vennor." The shock was so great that the owner of the premises went over backward, and striking on his head saw stars enough to keep his entire family in weather for months to come.

Unrivaled

As being a certain cure for the worst forms of dyspepsia, indigestion, constipation, impurity of blood, torpid liver, disordered kidneys, etc., and as a medicine for eradicating every species of humor, from an ordinary pimple to the worst ulcer, BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS stand unrivaled. Price $1.

An Episcopal clergyman, who has recently taken charge of a parish in a small town in Massachusetts, was called upon to attend a funeral a few days after he assumed the performance of his duties. As he entered the house of mourning he was met by a member of the bereaved family, who said: "You are an Episcopalian, I believe." "Yes." "Well, sir, I don't know much about your practices, but I believe you like to undress and dress a good deal. Perhaps you would like to go up stairs and put on a shroud." The clergyman went at once.—Boston Journal.

A TRUE BLESSING.

It would indeed be a true blessing to poor weak, nervous, debilitated, Suffering humanity, if druggists would stop selling the many vile purgative pills and cathartic compounds advertised for the cure of liver complaint. Although they afford temporary relief, at the same time they weaken the digestive organs, and compell a continued and increasing use of same. Suffering from dyspepsia and liver complaint do not need a cathartic, but should use some true medicinal tonic that will strengthen the digestive organs, and heal the diseased tissues of the stomach, liver and bowels. Such a remedy is Brown's Iron Bitters and it never fails to effect a permanent cure. Thurlow Weed.—For years he has always repeated the Lord's prayer before going to sleep, but with two alterations of the text, omitting the two words, "which art," in the first sentence, and instead of "this day" in the invocation for daily bread, substituting the clause "day by day." It is a relief to me to repeat the Lord's prayer before going to bed, and I could not sleep without it. I cannot believe, and cannot be brought to believe, that the purpose of our creation is fulfilled by our short existence here. To me the existence of another world is a necessary supplement of this, to adjust its inequalities and imbue it with moral significance.

By mortgage bearing date October 20th, A. D., 1877, and recorded in the office of the Register of deeds for Washtenaw county, Michigan, on the 22nd day of October, A. D., 1877, at 2 o'clock P. M., in liber 56 of mortgages, on page 102, Isaac B. Gilbert and Rhoda M. Gilbert, his wife, duly mortgaged to Ann Mariott, "All that certain piece or parcel of land situate and being in the city of Ypsilanti, in the county of Washtenaw and state of Michigan, and described as follows, to-wit: —

Commencing at the north-west corner of land described in quit claim deed bearing date the 26th day of August, 1874, made by Newell Newton and wife to George C. Bannan, running thence southerly on the west line of land described in said quit claim deed to line between French claims six hundred and ninety (690) and six hundred and ninety-one (691), thence westerly on said line between said French claims 690 and 691 to the east line of land conveyed by A. S. Clark and wife to Joseph Bickford by deed dated March 21st, 1859, and recorded in the office of Register of Deeds for Washtenaw county in liber 44 of deeds on page 757, thence northerly along said east line to the south line of the Chicago road, so called, thence easterly to the place of beginning."

The said mortgage expressly provides that should any default be made in the payment of the interest mentioned therein, or any part thereof, on any day whereon the same is made payable, and should the same remain unpaid and in arrear for the space of ninety days, then the principal sum of one thousand dollars with all arreages of interest shall, at the option of the mortgagee, her executors, administrators or assigns, become and be due and payable immediately.

Default has been made for more than ninety days in the payment of two installments of interest, due on the 20th days of October, in the years 1880 and 1881; and by means of such default, and at the election of said mortgagee, the said principal sum secured by said mortgage, with all arrearages of interest thereon, has become due and payable, and the power of sale therein contained has become operative.

There is claimed to be due on said mortgage at the date of this notice the sum of eleven hundred and ninety-eight dollars and seventy-five hundredths dollars, and no suit or proceeding having been instituted at law or in equity to recover the debt now remaining secured by said mortgage, or any part thereof; now therefore notice is hereby given that said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the mortgaged premises therein (and above) described, or so mnch thereof as may be necessary to satisfy the amount due on said mortgage at the date of said sale, together with the costs and expenses of this foreclosure, at public vendue, to the highest bidder, on Tuesday, the 13th day of June A. D., 1882, at nine o'clock and fifteen minutes, in the forenoon of said day, at the south front door of the Court House in the city of Ann Arbor, in the county of Washtenaw, Michigan, (that being the place of holding the Circuit Court for said county.)

POLITICAL.

It is not at all desirable that Uncle Sam should play the bully among the small powers on this side of the globe, but it is desirable, on several accounts, that the more precocious of the small powers should not be tempted, by any show of weakness on his part, into the folly of attempting to bully Uncle Sam.

The Boston Advertiser thinks this a good time for the exercise of forbearance. From Maine through all the states where Republicanism has a foothold, the word must be passed along the line that caution and forbearance and the abdication of the one-man power are preeminently necessary when parties so evenly divide the country, and a few votes may turn the scale in more than one state.

The Republican party of West Virginia, it is claimed by the Wheeling Intelligencer, is having a continuous and healthy growth. That paper urges the Greenback party, as the money question has been virtually settled, to unite with the Republicans and aid in the overthrow of Bourbonism in the state. The Democratic vote for Hancock in 1880 was 57,391, while the combined Republican and Greenback vote was 55,322, leaving a Democratic majority in the state of only 2,069.

Ex-Secretary Kirkwood will probably go back to congress as the representative from the new 5th Iowa district. His position is understood to be this: He will not seek the nomination, but if the Republicans choose him as their candidate he will not decline. The other candidates that have appeared in the field will undoubtedly withdraw, and the ex-secretary will be given an enthusiastic nomination. Of his election there will be no doubt.

The national debt was reduced $14,415,823.74 during the month of April. This result was achieved under Republican administration, and furnishes another answer, which the people will regard as conclusive, to the labored criticisms upon the party which have been freely indulged in of late by sundry Democratic statesmen in their letters of regret to dinners given in honor of the memory of Thomas Jefferson. The masses are unable to understand Messrs. Tilden, Cox and the rest when they declare against "centralization;" but they find no difficulty in appreciating the true inwardness of getting out of debt at the rate of nearly fourteen and a half million dollars a month. It would seem to be wise for Mr. Jefferson's friends to postpone any further dinners they may have in mind, or at least refrain from giving them a political turn until the Republicans stop rendering this sort of debt statements. N. Y. Tribune.

Why They Die,

A New York clergyman has discovered that Americans are dying out, there have been 12,494 more deaths than births in that city in 1881, while in London there were 51,047 more births than deaths. Inquiring into the cause he says:

One reason why Americans are dying out is because they eat too much and too fast. A person studying closely the habits of Americans would think that their object in life was to eat. Americans can't converse five minutes without something to eat. Another reason why Americans are dying out is because they drink too much. The curse of our nation is intemperance. A third reason why Americans are dying out is because they gamble too fast. We are becoming a nation of gamblers. This spirit of gambling is undermining all honest industries. Another reason is disappointed ambition. We are a nation of rivals. Each man desires to lead his fellows. A republic has many blessings, but it possesses one disadvantage, the failure to satisfy the grasping ambition of its teeming millions. The last reason for Americans dying out is their false standard of success, money. If a man in Europe fails in business or loses his money by some unexpected calamity, his friends will still remain true to him, as a rule. But in this country let a man lose his fortune by adversity and he is quickly forgotten. We should not gauge the amenities and duties of life upon a person's bank book, for in doing so we introduce those causes of discouragement, inaction and national death which will not only make Americans die out, but every nation under the sun.

The rush of immigration continues, at New York; the average of late has been nearly 3,000 a day. Most of the new comers have means sufficient to give them a fair start. All kinds are coming. The arrivals on Tuesday of last week were 4,000, coming by eight different steamers and consisting of English, Scotch, Irish, Germans, French, Dutch, Danes, Slavonians, Russians and Italians. Spanish laborers are arriving also. Blacksmiths went to Pittsburgh, silk weavers to Patterson and iron workers into the interior of Pennsylvania.

On leaving Mentone, Queen Victoria presented to the poor of that place 3,000 francs, and to charitable institutions, 1,500 francs; while as personal mementos of her visit she gave to the Mayor a set of diamond studs, to the English consul portraits of herself and the Princess Beatress, to the consul's son a diamond pin, to the postmaster a diamond ring, to the depot-master a gold chain, to his assistant a gold pencil-case and pin, and to the chief of police a gold ring

From the Jeannette to Bennett Island.

Lieut. Danenhower gives a thrilling account of the experiences of his party in their retreat from the Jeannette after she went down. We follow him in his march on the ice, until the party reached Bennett Island:

We often came to water holes, which caused us much delay in ferrying over. The method of doing this was as follows: First, a large ice piece was found; on this the boats and sleds were placed, and then all the floating mass was drawn over by the men on the other side, who had transported themselves across by the little dingy or even on smaller ice-floes. Some of these water spaces were as much as a hundred yards wide. These openings were not connected and of course could not be used in the direction we wished to go. On many occasions the boats had to be launched and paddled across, and then hauled up again on the opposite side. Chipp took charge of this part of the work admirably, and the men were always glad to have him at their head. It was wonderful how he kept up. As soon as the list was clear of sick the hospital tent was dispensed with, and I for many days walked after the whale-boat, but with Melville always watching me jumping cracks and pulling me out when I fell in. I found it very difficult to judge of distances with one eye bandaged and the other covered with a dark goggle.

In the latter part of June the snow all melted and traveling was better, but the men had to wade through pools of thaw-water, and their feet were constantly wet. Seaman's Kaach' feet were covered with blood-blisters, but he never gave in. Nindeman and Bartlett were always the leading men in dragging the boats, each being stationed at the bow to slew them and to lift them over heavy obstructions. As the roads became better we were able to advance two sleds at a time, but we would often have to jump them from piece to piece in crossing leads. Jack Cole and Harry Warren were the leading men of one party and Bartlett and Nindeman of the other. The number of times passed over the ground was now reduced to seven and the advance was thus very much facilitated. Mt. Dunbar was to start out with two or three flags on his shoulder, and pick out the best road, planting his flags here and there in prominent places. The old gentleman was very careful and efficient, though the captain would often take an entirely different road, on several occasions insisting on ferrying the goods across after the ice had come together within fifty yards of us.

About the 12th of July we saw a "whale back" that looked very much like a snow covered island. I have forgotten to tell you that there were some slight changes in the course previous to this. I think it was changed to south (magnetic), which would be about 17 (true), for there was about 17 degrees of easterly variation. The captain then shaped the course toward the point where land was thought to have been seen. At this time we began to see a heavy water sky to the south and south east, and the ice to the southwest was more broken and in greater motion, making traveling very difficult. About July 20 we worked about 12 hours in advancing 1,000 yards over small pieces of ice constantly shifting. We could not float the boats. The land already mentioned appeared greatly distorted by atmospheric effects. and indeed, until within a few days of reaching it, a great many would not believe that it existed at all.

Our progress toward the land was slow, but finally we could see the glaciers and water courses upon it quite distinctly. We were shaping a course toward the northeast end of the island, the drift of the ice being along the east face. At times we were forced to remain idle in our camping place, it being quite impossible either to move over the rough broken ice, always in rapid motion, or to launch the boats. On the 24th of July we reached a point two miles distant from the land, but the men were so exhausted we had to camp. Next morning we found that we had drifted at least three miles to the southward and along the east side of the island. July 27 was very foggy, and we were working our way through living masses of ice, when the mist lifted a little and an immense sugar loaf towered above us.

We had been swept in by the current, and now seemed to be our chance of reaching the icefoot of the island, which was very narrow, rugged and broken, being aground in 19 fathoms of water We finally got everything on one big floe-piece, and as we carromed on the icefoot we made a rally and jumped everything upon the ice-clad beach. But before the last boats and sleds were hauled up the floe piece drifted away, leaving them perched on the edge of the ice in a very dangerous position, and they had to be left there for some hours. Then succeeded the difficult work of getting the boats and sleds through the very rough and broken fringe along the shore. About 6 P. M. we had succeeded in reaching some smooth pieces near the south cape, and there we camped down, each tent being on a separate piece of floe. There was a solid breakwater outside of us, consequently we were not in any great danger, though the blocks we were on were sometimes in motion as the tide rose and fell. At this point the sides of the island were very bold and steep, composed of trap rock and a lava-like soil, very dry, so much so that frequent land sides were occurring all the time we were there. Mr. Collins and I took a walk over the rough ice and along the south point of the island in order to get a view of the south side. It appeared very rugged and trended off to the northwest. From a high hummock we saw land to the west-northwest. About 7 P. M. the captain mustered everybody on the island. It was so steep that we could hardly get a footing. He then unfurled the beautiful silk flag that had been made for him by Mrs. DeLong, and took possession of the island in the name of the President of the United States, and called it "Bennett Island." This was succeeded by hearty cheers, three times three, with a good American "tiger." There were millions of birds nesting in the cliffs, and their noise was almost deafening. I think one seal was seen, but no walrus, during our stay of nearly a week on the island. The south cape was called Cape Emma, after the captain's wife, and was in latitude 70 deg. 38 min. north, longitude 148 deg. 20 min. east.

The captain and doctor thought, too, that the party needed rest and change of diet, so the men were sent out to get birds and driftwood, so that we could economize on our alcohol. In a few hours they knocked down several hundred birds with sticks and stones. These were brought into camp and divided out. Their effect after being eaten was like that of young veal, and pretty nearly every one of the party was made sick, the doctor included. I used to eat half a peck of scurvy grass every day, and that kept me well. But we had finally to return to pemmican and were very glad to do so after such a surfeit of birds. Mr. Dunbar and the two Indians were sent up the east side of the island to explore. They were gone two days and reached the northeast point. They found the land on the east side was more promising than on the south. They found several grassy valleys, some old deer horns, some driftwood and saw large numbers of birds. Lieut. Chipp, with Mr. Collins and a boat's crew, explored the south and west sides, and promising reports came from them. A fair quality of lignite was found in several places. Mr. Melville experimented with it and determined that it would be serviceable fuel for steaming purposes. The tidal action at the island was very great and quite remarkable for this part of the world. The ice outside of us was in constant motion and seeming to be lifted regularly with the rise of the water. We had a tide guage set up, and it was observed every hour by Bartlett, Nindemann and Lee. As I remember the greatest rise and fall was about three feet; they were regular six hour tides. While on the island I observed that the sea to the south and west was freer from ice than that to the eastward, and that water clouds to the northwest were very common, and it occurred to me that in good seasons a vessel could reach the island, which might form a good base for explorations further to the north.

Darwin.

In manners and general appearance Mr. Darwin looked like the typical English country gentleman, and so deported himself that the neighborhood farmers, as well as country gentlemen, always spoke of him in the highest terms.

His home was a fine old house in Kent, an hour and a half by rail and drive from London, the pretty village being called Down, near Beckenham. Here he lived very many years, having for an intimate neighbor Sir John Lubbock, known for his enthusiasm on the subject of ants. The residence was of the old English country style, with wild vines and ivy covering it to the second story. The drawing-room was elegantly furnished, and up to this point no visitor would suspect that he was in the home of the greatest naturalist of the time, the surroundings differing in no way from those of other Englishmen.

Glass doors opened out on a rose-clad veranda, and here Darwin very often took his meals, so fond he was of the spot, for its beautiful view of his extensive park, the scene of many an investigation into and experiments with plants. From the parlor another door led to the laboratory, where his working hours—probably an average of twelve a day—were passed. Tiers of pigeon-holes, which he filled with scraps of newspapers, etc., treating on any subjects in natural history, showed by their fullness his patient toil, and he was a truly omniverous reader, more especially of German periodicals. He was not at all jealous of the origin of an idea that he could assimilate, but gladly gave credit.

HOSPITABLE YET RETIRING.

Darwin was a retired, almost shy man, and though receiving with cordiality and even warmth of hospitality and welcome all who came—and his callers were legion—he seldom or never returned the compliment of a visit. He was too busy, first, and secondly, shrank innately from society.

He never talked on his hobbies, as one might say, unless broached to him, and then he sometimes, for a fact, got very long-winded, the pitch of his voice growing with his interest, but one could never tire of his clear periods in which the sincerest conviction was evidently blended with curious fact and original philosophy.

He died worth probably a quarter of a million, a good deal of it in his generous estate at Down. His widow, the daughter of Wedgwood, the great porcelain-maker, is a lady of charming social qualities, entertaining her guests in a bewitching manner. One of his daughters—five children survive him—was the most faithful of secretaries to him, and grateful and indeed indispensable was the service, his letters averaging twenty a day, from all parts of the world and on all manner of scientific and literary subjects, not a few of, the writers of course being those friends, autograph seekers. A place of great recreation for him was his conservatory, with an outlying series of hot houses. In most of them there were no flowers, but everything was of the moss order. At my last visit he was absorbingly interested in the experiment of planting a shrub with the top down and roots up, to further illustrate his theory of 'reverse growth.' Long before he had the branch of a peculiar tree put with its leaf end into the ground and top root rising as the highest bough, and curious enough he succeeded in perpetuating life, showing as he philosophized that light and heat and warmth are essential conditions of growth.

A few years ago it was the custom in Ohio for enterprising road supervisors to deaden every tree that shaded the country roads. Millions of beautiful trees were thus sacrificed. The people of the state have wisely resolved to stop all this, and begin to replant.

A HANDFUL OF EARTH.

a problem, a wonder for all to see.
k at this marvellous thing I hold in my hand!
This is a magic surprising, a mystery
Strange as a miracle, harder to understand.

What is it? only a handful of earth; to your touch
A dry-rough powder you trample beneath your feet,
Dark and lifeless; but think, for a moment, how much
It hides and holds that is beautiful, bitter or sweet.

Think of the glory of color! The red of the rose,
Green of the myriad leaves and the fields of grass,
Yellow as bright as the sun where the daffodil blows,
Purple where violets nod as the breezes pass.

Think of the manifold form of the oak and the vine,
Nut, and fruit, and cluster, and ears of corn;
Of the anchored water-lily, a thing divine,
Unfolding its dazzling snow to the kiss of morn.

Think of the delicate perfumes borne on the gale,
Of the golden willow catkin's odor of Spring,
Of the breath of the rich narcissus waxen-pale,
Of the sweet pea's flight of flowers, of the nettle's sting.

Strange that this lifeless thing gives vine flower, tree,
Color and shape and character, fragrance, too,
That the timber that builds the house, the ship for the sea,
Out of this powder its strength and its toughness drew!

That the cocoa among the palms should suck its milk
From this dry dust, while dates from the self-same soil
Summon their sweet, rich fruit; that our shining silk
The mulberry leaves should yield to he worm's slow toil.

How should the poppy steal sleep from the very source
That grants to the grape-vine juice that can madden or cheer?
How does the weed find food for its fabric course
Where the lilies proud their blossoms pure uprear?

Who shall compass or fathom God's thought profound?
We can but praise, for we may not understand;
But there's no more beautiful riddle the whole world round
Than is hid in this heap of dust I hold in my hand.

started from her reverie as rwoman's stumpy little girl rself, like a human battering-ram, up against the door, with a preposterously large basket on her arm.

'Yes,' said Honora, coloring. 'Put them down, Sally. But I—I'm afraid it isn't convenient to pay your mother to day.'

'Mother didn't say nothin' 'bout the pay,' said Sally, wiping her forehead with a whisk of her hand, sniffling herself nearly off her feet. 'I was to leave the clothes with her 'umble duty, and she 'oped they'd suit; but it was that damp on Monday and Tuesday as starch wouldn't stick. And she 'opes you'll excuse all mistakes, as they'll be done better next time.'

'I dare say they are quite right,' said Honora, with a little sight, as she marvelled at this unexpected access of courtesy on the part of her Milesian laundress.

But when Sally had stumped off down stairs, her flapping slippers beating a sort of tattoo as she went, and Miss Maywood took off the fringed towel that covered the basket of clothes, she gave a little start.

'Shirts,' said Honora, 'and socks, and turn-over collars, No. 16, and great, big pocket handkerchiefs, like the sails of a ship, and white vests, and—goodness me! what does it all mean? Mrs. Mulvey has sent me some gentleman's wardrobe by mistake. I must send these things back at once.'

But then Miss Maywood looked down at the articles in grave consideration.

'I never had a brother,' mused Miss Maywood; 'and I can't remember my father; but of this I am quite certain, if I had either one or the other, I should thank a girl to mend their dilapidated wardrobes if they looked like this. And Mrs. Mulvey can't send before night, and unfortunately I have nothing to do, so I'll just mend this poor young fellow's clothes, whoever he may be. A half-starved theological student, perhaps, training for the Polynesian Islands; or, perhaps a newspaper reporter, or a pale clerk under the dazzling sky lights of some dry goods palace. At all events, he's worse off than I am, for he can't mend his own clothes and I can.'

And the smiles dimpled around Honora Maywood's little rosebud of a mouth, as she sat down to darn-holes, sew on tapes, and insert patches.

'He'll never know who did it,' said Honora to herself, 'but I dare say he'll be thankful; and if one can't get a little good in this world, one ought not to grudge one's time and trouble.'

And as Honora sitched away she mused sadly whether or not she ought to accept a position which had offered itself as assistant matron in an orphan asylum, where the work would be almost unendurable, and the pay next to nothing, with no Sundays nor holidays, and a ladies' committee, consisting of three starched old maids, to 'sit' upon her the first Friday of every month.

'I almost think I'd rather starve,' said Honora. But, dear me! starving is a serious business, when one comes to consider it face to face.

Sally Mulvey came back, puffing and blowing like a human whale, in about two hours.

'Mother says she's sent the wrong basket,' said she breathlessly.

'I thought it very probable, Sally,' said Miss Maywood.

'And mother compliments,' added Sally, 'and she can't undertake your things no longer, Miss Maywood, 'cause she does a cash business, and there ain't nothing been paid on your account since last June.'

Honora felt herself turning scarlet.

'I am very sorry, Sally,' said she. 'Tell your mother I will settle my bill as soon as I possibly can.'

Sally flounced out of the room, red and indignant, like an overcharged thunder cloud, and poor little Honora, dropping her head on her hands, burst into tears.

* * * * * *

'Pretty girl that—very pretty,' said Mr. Broderick, the old bachelor, to his landlady.

'Do you mean—'

'I mean the young lady boarder of yours that I see on the stairs now and then,' said Mr. Broderick. 'Nice figure—big, soft eyes, like a gazelle. Didn't some one tell me she was a music teacher?'

'That's her profession,' said Mrs. Pennypacker. 'But there ain't many pupils as wants tuition, and, poor little dear, she has but a hard time of it.'

'Humph!' grunted Mr. Broderick. 'What fools women are not to have a regular profession. If I had a daughter I'd bring her up a self-supporting institution.' And Mr. Broderick disappeared into his room, in the midst whereof stood a girl with flapping slippers, a portentous shawl and bonnet, which had originally been manufactured for a woman twice her size.

'Who are you?' demanded Mr. Broderick.

'Please sir,' I'm Sally—the washer-woman's Sally!' was the response.

'And what do you want here?' asked Mr. Broderick.

'Please, sir, I've come to bring your things,' said Sally, chattering off her lesson like a parrot. 'And please, sir, her 'umble duty, and she 'opes they'll suit, but it was that damp and muggy Monday and Tuesday, as starch wouldn't stick; and she 'opes you'll excuse all mistakes, as they shall be done better next time, sir—please.'

Who mended 'em?' demanded Mr. Broderick, whose hawk-eye had already caught sight of the dainty needle-work upon his garments.

'Nobody mended 'em,' said Sally. 'And mother she says its easy to see as the new gentleman is a bachelor, on account of the holes in his heels and toes and strings off his dickeys.'

'I can tell who mended 'em,' said Mrs. Pennypacker, 'for I see her at it, the pretty dear—Miss Maywood! And says she, 'I don't know whose they are, Mrs. Pennypacker, but,' says she, 'they need mending, and a kind action never comes amiss.' No more it does, sir, Lord bless her!'

'Humph!' said Mr. Roderick. 'She's right—no more it does, And she's a regular scientist at the needle, is Miss Maywood. Just look at that patch, Mrs. Pennypacker! Euclid's geometry couldn't produce a straighter line or truer angle. See the toe of that stocking! It's like a piece of Oobelin tapestry. That's the way I like to see things done.'

And Mr. Broderick never rested until he had been formally introduced to Honora Maywood, and had thanked her with equal formality for the good offices she had unwittingly rendered him.

* * * * * *

It was a golden October evening that Honora came down into the kitchen, where Mrs. Pennypacker was baking pies for her eccentric boarder, with the crusts made of the best Alderney butter instead of lard.

'Oh, dear! oh, dear!' said Mrs. Pennypacker. 'What a thing it is to be an old bachelor.'

'He won't be a bachelor much longer,' said Honora, laughing and coloring.

'What do you mean?' said Mrs. Pennypacker.

'He has asked me to marry him,' said Honora, 'after only two weeks' acquaintance. He says that a girl who can mend stockings as I do needs no other test.'

And so the problem of Honora's solitary life was solved, all through the magic influence of 'Needle and Thread.'

Avalanches in Nevada.

Several mining towns in Nevada suffered severely by avalanches during the month of March. The snow falls were excessive—from five to seven feet in the valleys, and more on the mountains—and slides from the steep mountain-sides were frequent. A considerable portion of the villiage of Genoa, Nevada, was wrecked on the 16th, and many of the inhabitants were killed or injured.

The slide came down the gorge immedaitely south of Genoa canon and swept everything before it as far as Main street. No obstacle seemed to check this moving mountain of snow until it spread out and lost its force on the nearly level piece of land on which Genoa is built, fully a quarter of a mile from the base of the mountains.

During the same storm scores of avalanches fell in and near the town of Lundy, in the Homer mining district. Some fifty or more persons were buried, and several of them killed.

The first avalanche at Lundy, on the afternoon of Wednesday, March 15, was shot over a lofty precipice near the top of Mount Scowden, which rises to a hight of 2,500 feet between and at the confluence of Lake and Mill Creek canons, overlooking the southern section of the town of Lundy. This body of loose, dry snow dropped about 800 feet, where it struck upon a bench of the mountain, bounded out upon the air compressed beneath it, sailed over the tops of the tallest pines, and came down, vertically, 1,500 feet from its last point of contact with the earth. Several residences were buried by the snow; but no lives were lost. A second avalanche at the same place was still more terrifying. It started from a cliff overhanging the business center of the town, where no snow-slide has ever been known to occur. Three-fourths of the population were in the streets in the course of the avalanche when it started, and they could not flee, as the snow was five feet deep and soft. Fortunately, the slide struck upon a broad and elongated rock mound or bench projecting from the mountain near its base and burst into a cloud of spray, or rather the compact snow was disintegrated and sent whirling with the velocity of fine shot from a gun, the rush of air created by the avalanche being sufficient to lift men from their feet and knock them several steps, and to drive the fine snow into planks of the building on the opposite side of the street.

An avalanche that shot down Mount Discovery, on the west side of Lake Canon, at 11 o'clock Wednsday night, buried many persons, swept away cabins and mining works, and covered the bodies of some of its victims to a depth of 45 feet. This slide was one-fourth of a mile in width, had run entirely across the canon, and 500 feet up the steep mountain on the other side.

Many other avalanches occured on Wednsday night and Thursday, some of them huge ones, that did great damage. Friday morning opened with a clear sky and a stiff, cold wind from the west. Just as the sun was pouring its welcome light into the canon, and the sleepless inhabitants had assembled on the sidewalk to bid it welcome, three huge avalanches, running parallel and simultaneously, went thundering down the northern slope of Mount Gilcrest, stiking the ice of Lake Lundy, and shooting across half a mile to the other shore. The sun had not yet struck the surface of the lake, but as immense clouds of fine, dry snow from the avalanches filled the air the full width of the canon, the sun poured through and turned the whole mass to eddying gold dust. Shortly afterward two other avalanches of huge proportions had a race into the canon from the south side—one from Deer canon and the other from the side of the mountain just east of it. The first named had a run of two miles before reaching the open country. On reaching the open moraine, it spread out like a pigeon's tail, to a width of nearly half a mile, and rolled down in a huge wall of snow, 300 or 400 feet high. In a space of one hour and a half no less than nine ponderous avalanches were witnessed from the town, some of them running clear across Lake Lundy, and one crossing the creek below.—Scientific American.

A SUBMARINE EXHIBITION.—A most interesting exhibition of naval and submarine engineering has been opened at the Agricultural Hall, London, the chief feature of which, after many fears that the pressure of the water could not be overcome, is a glass tank, sixty feet in circumference, wherein divers can be seen working, clad in grotesque submarine armor. The exhibition contains a vast number of models of patents, all deeply instructive. There are life rafts, sea messengers, lighthouses, engines, boat lowering and ship raising apparatus and thousands of other objects. The visitor can compare the lines of the Chinese junk with the latest Atlantic steamship, or that imperial failure, the Livadia, with the latest racing cutter, or the Mississippi three-decker with a steel clipper tea ship. In Edinburgh, Lord Rosebery has opened the International Fisheries Exhibition, which is as interesting and complete as that to which reference has just been made. It affords a complete insight into the ways and habits of big fish and little fish and into the various methods of transferring them from their native waters to the frying pan.

A Fisher Caught.

"On my last trip to the States," said Mr. Arthur Fisher of this paper, "I caught a very bad cold which settled into a severe case of rheumatism. I did not know what to do for it, so I resolved to purchase St. Jacobs Oil for trial. Happy thought. I began applying the Oil, and in two weeks was as well as ever. — Toronto (Canada Globe.

A horse was stolen at Lexington and the telegraph wires cut between that place and Port Huron.

The Carson City (Nev.) Appeal says: St. Jacobs Oil is good for rheumatism, neuralgia and a thousand different ills.

"How profoundly still and beautiful is the night," she whispered, resting her finely veined temple against his coat collar, and fixing her dreamy eyes on the far-off Pleiades: "how soothing how restful." "Yes, he replied, toying with the golden aureola of her hair, "and what a night to shoot cats."

CONSUMPTION.

Important to the Public as well as the Medical Profession.

Hall's Journal of Health, referring to Consumption, makes the following important statement:

"Consumption usually begins with a slight, dry cough in the morning, then, on going to bed, getting more and more frequent, with more and more phlegm, increasing debility, thinness of flesh, shortness of breath, and quickness of pulse. In fatal cases its average course is about two years; hence the importance of arresting the disease at as early a stage as possible, and the sooner rational means are employed for this purpose the greater the chance of success. The disease is owing to an irritation commencing in the throat and extending to the lungs, so that their action is interfered with, and the blood does not receive sufficient oxygen to purify it. The most marked sign of lung disease is emaclation; and the most positive indication of returning health is increase in weight."

So speaks Hall's Journal of Health, and we may add that in desperate cases and, in fact, in all cases of Consumption, or troubles of the throat and lungs, immediate relief may be obtained and a permanent cure effected by the use of Dr. Wm. Hall's Balsam for the Lungs, a medicine known for more than thirty-five years as an unfailing remedy for coughs, colds, bronchitis and all pulmonary and pectoral diseases. That the worst cases of Consumption have been cured by the use of Hall's Balsam has been attested to by thousands who have used it, or have been cognizant of its wonderful remedial efficacy.

In spite of all that has been said about the satisfactory ventilation of the Mont Cenis Tunnel, it is reported that the locomotive engineers have to wear mouth-pieces attached to reservoirs of fresh air white traversing it.

Mrs. Sarah J. Van Buren, of 192 Franklin St., Buffalo, N. Y., whose portrait appears in another column of this paper, is preparing a "Ladies' Tonic" which has proved a blessing indeed to many a worn out wife or mother. The sensitiveness of woman's organization makes her more susceptible to disease than man, and there has been a long felt want among ladies for something which would overcome those many weaknesses so common to the sex, and assist nature in building up a shattered constitution. This Mrs. Van Buren's "Ladies' Tonic" has never failed to do.

PERILS OF THE DEEP.

"During my trip down the River Tagus, in Spain," said Captain Boyton to a representative of this journal in a recent conversation by the sea shore, "I had to 'shoot' 105 waterfalls, the largest being about eighty-five feet, and innumerable rapids. Crossing the Straits of Messina, I had three ribs broken in a fight with sharks; and coming down the Somane, a river in France, I received a charge of shot from an excited and startled huntsman. Although this was not very pleasant and might be termed dangerous, I fear nothing more on my trip than intense cold; for, as long as my limbs are free and easy and not cramped or benumbed I am all right. Of late I carry a stock of ST. JACOBS OIL in my little boat—[The Captain calls it "Baby Mine," and has stored therein signal rockets, thermometer, compass, provisions, etc.]—and I have but little trouble. Before starting out I rub myself thoroughly with the article, and its action upon the muscles is wonderful. From constant exposure I am somewhat subject to rheumatic pains, and nothing would ever benefit me until I got hold of this Great German Remedy. Why, on my travels I have met people who had been suffering with rheumatism for years; by my advice they used the Oil and it cured them. I would sooner do without food for days than be without this remedy for one hour. In fact I would not attempt a trip without it." The Captain became very enthusiastic on the subject of ST. JACOBS OIL, and when we left him he was still citing instances of the curative qualities of the Great German Remedy to a party around him.

NEILSON'S SECRET FOR THE COMPLEXION

A Most Elegant Toilet Preparation.

As its name implies, it was the favorite and only preparation used by that most beautiful and accomplished actress, MISS ADELAIDE NEILSON, for whom it was expressly prepared and supplied by the inventor, not only during her stay in this country, but when in England and Europe. The wondrous transparent beauty and freshness of complexion, for which MISS NEILSON was noted, is the best recommendation that can be offered in its behalf. It is a most delightful adjunct to the toilet, especially after exposure to the hot sun or winds, as it prevents tan, freckles, etc., and gives a delightful cooling and refreshing feeling to the surface. It is perfectly harmless. The proprietress offers ONE THOUSAND DOLLARS to any one who can find even a trace of any mineral, poisonous, or deleterious substance whatever, in NEILSON'S SECRET for the complexion.

This "recherche" preparation for the toilet does not give a whitewashed appearance to the face, like Humpty Dumpty in the Pantomime, but so assimilates itself with the skin that it cannot be detected even under the brilliant glare of the Electric Light. PRICE, 25 CENTS,

Sold by all Druggists and Dealers in Fancy Goods, or will be sent by mail upon receipt of price in stamps. Address

D. C. HARTER'S IRON TONIC

A combination of Protoxide of Iron, Peruvian Bark and Phosphorus in a palatable form. The only preparation of iron that will not blacken the teeth, so characteristic of other iron preparations.

GENTLEMEN: I have used DR. HARTER'S IRON TONIC in my practice, and in an experience of twenty-five years in medicine, have never found anything to give the results that DR. HARTER'S IRON TONIC does. In many cases of Nervous Prostration, Female Diseases, Dyspepsia, and an impoverished condition of the blood, this peerless remedy, has in my hands, made some wonderful cures. Cases that have baffled some of our most eminent physicians, have yielded to this great and incomparable remedy. I prescribe it in preference to any Iron preparation made. In fact, such a compound as DR. HARTER'S IRON TONIC is a necessity in my practice.

ST. LOUIS, MO., Nov. 26th, 1881. DR. ROBERT SAMUELS, 3104 Wash Avenue.

It gives color to the blood, natural healthful tone to the digestive organs and nervous system, making it applicable to General Debility, Loss of Appetite, Prostration of Vital Powers and Impotence.

Dr. McCorkle will give a lecture on temperance to-morrow evening from his pulpit. This will no doubt be well worth attention.

Whoever watched the planets Jupiter and Venus in the west since May 1st after sunset, witnessed a beautiful spectacle and also got a clear view of the working of the machinery of the Solar system.

The Young Peoples' Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church of this city will hold their May Festival on the evening of May 26th. A new and attractive program is being prepared. Fuller notice will be given in our next.

The Land League Entertainment on Monday last was a success in every particular. The house was crowded, and after a program of music, readings, and recitations, the house dissolved itself into a social and a jolly time was had. The meeting expressed joy at the new Irish policy, and sorrow and regret at the assassination. The next meeting will occur May 22nd. The public is invited.

President Clark Cornwell then read his address, which was an able and practical document. He referred to the unusual loss of life during the past year, gave a description of the Park Row fire in New York, and the excellent work of the department in saving the adjacent buildings which a view of the ruins evinced; alluded to the forest fires of Michigan and dwelt strongly upon the relations of fire insurance companies and fire departments, setting forth the futility of trying to keep up volunteer departments with no appropriations to render them efficient, in the face of high rates for insurance, under which conditions it is hard to tell whether a man wants his building saved or destroyed, when it catches fire. His address was received with applause.—Jackson Citizen.

NORMAL ITEMS.

Bug baggers begin bagging beetles before bed time.

The fair botanists now tread the morass in search of specimens.

Miss Ettie Lee and John Jackson played the organ and violin at the Land League celebration last Monday eve.

Rooms number 4, 13, and 16 are now in use.

Mrs. Barnes (nee Blanche Cudworth) is visiting in the city.

The Normal boys on Tuesday took the Ypsilantians' water and led them by about ten boat lengths. Score 13 to 3.

We would like to see some regularity in the marching in chapel. Will some of the faculty rise and tell the students upon which foot to rest the weight of the body, and which foot to start first. There is no use in having one fellow accenting with his right and another with his left foot.

The following are those who will take part in Commencement exercises, higher courses: Messrs Weeks, Hewitt, McKinney, Pierce, Edwards and McLouth; Misses. Lee, Beerman, Webb, Mary Lockwood, Wheeler, and Mabel Robinson. Common School Course: Messrs. Lynd, Essery, Mickens, and Houston; Misses. Clements, Myra Redfield, Dwyer, Dora Smith, Ewer, Mary McNiel, Ellis, and Worwell.

Resolutions were passed by the school, and entered upon the records of the faculty, thanking Mr. John Starkweather for the tree generously given for Arbor Day.

A complimentary resolution was passed by the Christian Association thanking Misses Vroman, Wheeler, Dwyer, Owen, Ellis, Sherman and Miller for their generous service in earning over $30 for the Association. Mrs. Prof. Lodeman, Misses VanDeusen and Coleman were also included in the resolution for the excellent music of the evening. All the young ladies, and especially Miss Wheeler, deserve the highest praise for their gratuitous services.

Since the St. Cecilia Musicale first started it has made its way over almost insuperable obstacles, and it now stands as a permanent success, and a monument of Miss MacVicar's labor and abilities. Voices in concert and operatic music were put at once into training, and at the Chamber Concert it was demonstrated that the Musicale needed only to have its faults remedied to be a choral strength. All of the present members have good voices and some are of considerable strength and richness. By careful study each member has corrected her faults, and at the Grand Concert to be given at the Opera House the last of June, we predict a large and interested audience. There have been three or four changes in the Musicale lately, which changes materially strengthen both the solo and chorus singing. While the Musicale does not boast itself a Normal organization it is always foremost in advancing Normal interests. The young ladies have generaly sung at each public, and at the decorating of trees on Arbor Day. We know the the Musicale will meet with the success in June which it richly merits.

If there is anything more despicable than the actions of some who are trying to hurt the St. Cecilia club, we would like to see it. What demon in what lonely cave could originate the thoughts that produce these actions we know not. Little! microscopic. Mean. "Aye aye mean." Men and women. God save the mark! Pout, resign, slander! Those persons who think they are injuring the Musicale are only showing how low respectability can get; The Musicale has ten to the death supporters where a week ago it had one.

How Now! What Is It.

The great system renovator is BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS. Try it and be convinced. Price $1.

SEMINARY ITEMS.

The numbers of the chorus class are increasing

The school which Miss Mary Lord, one of our juniors has charge of, is reported to number seventy. This certainly speaks well for her success.

The circus did not detract much from the usual attendance of the High School. About the usual number were detained by the rain. Principal Carman was a little late owing to the smash up on the rail-road. Perhaps the glimpse that he got of the lone elephant was worth his time.

Thursday two of the University Professors made their appearance to make their yearly examinations of the High School. In examining the classes, they never asked a question on the points that had been carefully studied up.

Three of the essays were read Thursday. Two of them sounded very familiar because so many were necessarily on the same subject. The essay on "Tobacco" was of course written by a boy, for no school girl could retail so much advice, gratis.

PERSONALS.

Dr. F. M. Oakley returned from Florida Wednesday evening.

Mrs. E. R. Hascall of Detroit is spending a few days with friends here.

Sergeant John P. Finley is making his parents a pleasant visit this week.

Mr A. Koyl has gone to Jackson to establish himself in the restaurant business.

A. B. Smith of the Milan Leader made us a pleasant call Saturday afternoon, of last week.

Lester Collar and wife of Tecumseh were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Forsyth, this week.

Mr. F. W. Hawkins and family are stopping with Mr. L. D. Shawerman. They leave for Saginaw on Friday. We wish them good luck in their new home.

Rev. Mr. Southerland from Atumwa, Ia., preached two instructive and impressive sermons at the Baptist church last Sunday. That in the evening on Spring and its lessons enchained the audience.

A. P. Bucklin has arrived at the common age of 70 and yet good for another generation. On the strength of this fact his daghter Miss Anna presented him a couch, raw silk, banded with plush.

Ypsilanti was represented in the Knight Templars' grand parade at Detroit—the finest ever witnessed in Michigan—by the following Sir Knights: John Gilbert, Mayor Scovill, Prof. Bellows, J. C. Bemis, Martin Cremer, Howard Stephenson. Howard did some tall commanding.

We much regretted our inabillity to attend the Pierce memorial exercises. One of those unpleasant visitors called a "sty" deprived us of the pleasure of attending the Land League meeting Monday evening and from paying proper respect to the medical convention that did our city the honor of holding its annual convention in our midst.

An Honest Preparation.

The world is so crammed with swindles that a really honest man or honest thing is almost as scarce as robins in January. Yet Mr. J. H. Northrop, of Lansingburg, N. J., formerly Captain of the troy Police, says Dr. David Kennedy's "Favorite Remedy" is "an honest preparation." And the Captain ought to know, for the medicine cured him of Liver complaint. Try it, or write to the Doctor, at Rondout, N. Y. 947-2-w
